NEW PRESIDENT OF BRAZIL GUEST OF THE CITY

Dr. Epitacio Pessoa, President-elect of the great South American republic, photographed with Mayor Peters. The Mayor is acting as the host of the distinguished visitor during his brief stay here.

Dr. Epitacio Pessoa, President-elect of Brazil and chairman of that nation's delegation to the peace conference, was ushered into the city's fold today amid a burst of cannon and escorted to the Copley-Plaza Hotel by a reception committee headed by Mayor Peters, who will be his host in behalf of the city.

Dr. Pessoa arrived in the North Station, and while passing the Commons en route to the hotel the presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

He was officially received by the State by Governor Coolidge in the Executive Chamber of the State House, after which he was taken to Revere Beach.

On his return Dr. Pessoa went to Harvard, where he was received by President A. Lawrence Lowell in the Faculty Room. He visited Widener Library and other points of interest.

SURPRISE AT POISON TRIAL

Attorney-General Attwill Forces Identification of Woman in Black

Lawrence, June 30.—Mrs. Bessie Mae (Skeels) Lundgren sat in the courtroom here today with blanched face and writhed as Attorney-General Henry C. Attwill attempted to picture her to the jury as the mistress of Frank M. Skeels, the man whose name she formerly bore.

Attorney-General Attwill staged the most dramatic moment of the trial. He had been questioning Mrs. Lundgren as to her possession of a marriage certificate. He intimated that she had fled from Paterson, N. J., with Frank Skeels while she knew he had another wife living.

Mrs. Lundgren was little by little losing the composure she had borne throughout the trial. As the Attorney-General fired question after question at her in his attempt to bare the history of her past and Mrs. Lundgren began to show signs of weakening under the strain, her attorney, Daniel J. Daley of Boston, rushed to her defence with objections. Judge Thayer overruled them and Attorney-General Attwill went on.

"Didn't you leave Paterson, N. J., in 1896 with Mr. Skeels?" he asked the now trembling defendant.

"I did not, sir," said Mrs. Lundgren.

Then Mr. Attwill sprung his surprise. "See if Mrs. DeWolf is here," he told a court officer.

Two court officers came forward, supporting between them a middle-aged woman dressed in black. The

$2,548,320 SUIT BEGUN AGAINST WOOL MEN

Federal Action in Case of English and O'Brien; Charge Evasion of Taxes

The Federal government today began suit for $2,548,320 against English & O'Brien, wool merchants on Congress street, as the result of alleged evasion of war taxes and a penalty of 100 per cent. imposed by Judge George W. Anderson for failure to comply with the Federal law requirements.

Assistant United States Attorney Lewis Goldberg, who represents the government in the case, contends that $1,379,817.49 of the total is due as a penalty, with an additional payment of $1,168,502.20 for 100 per cent. failure to pay taxes. Of the total, $299,000 is to be deducted which has already been paid the government.

Judge Anderson of the United States District Court last Friday handed down a decision in which he stated that he would impose a fine of $10,000 and a sentence of eighteen months in prison on each defendant who pleaded guilty. At one of the hearings given before Judge Anderson relative to passing sentence on both men, an offer of $1,500,000 was made to pay the government, but this was turned down by the court. This offer was made through the firm's attorneys to settle the case in this manner.

RHODE ISLAND WOMEN WILL REGISTER EARLY

Providence, June 30.—As a result of an active two campaign by suffrage workers, hundreds of women will register tomorrow to make themselves eligible to vote in the next presidential election. Although voters have a full year in which to register, the woman suffragists have been importuning their sisters to get on the lists at the earliest possible moment.

According to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, national suffrage leader, there are 185,000 prospective women voters in Rhode Island. The total vote cast for President in 1916 was only 90,000, and the total in the State elections in 1918 was only 82,000.

TREATY'S FATE DEPENDS UPON FIGHT IN U. S. TO AMEND COVENANT

CENTRE OF ACTION SHIFTS TO SENATE CHAMBER

By JUSTIN McGRATH,
Editorial Correspondent Universal Service.

Washington, June 30.—With the signing of the peace treaty at Versailles and the sailing of President Wilson from Brest, the centre of the world's most important action shifts from Paris to Washington.

The signing of the treaty by the plenipotentiaries of all of the great powers other than the United States practically means its ratification by those powers. The United States will not become a party to the treaty until it shall have been ratified by the Senate, and there is as yet no certainty that it will be ratified by the Senate, at least without reservations, which the other powers may not be able to accept.

It is because of this uncertainty that the interest of the entire world will be fixed on Washington until the United States Senate shall have acted.

OPPOSITION STRENGTHENED.

There is no doubt the signing of the treaty and President Wilson's statement proclaiming it a "charter for a new era of affairs in the world" has strengthened the Senate opposition.

Owing to the declaration made by several Senators who heretofore were regarded as inclined to favor the treaty that they would insist upon some reservations, those who have been consistently opposed to the League of Nations covenant are more confident than ever now that reservations will be made by the Senate which will render the covenant practically innocuous.

President Wilson's cablegram to Secretary Tumulty, addressed to "My Fellow-Countrymen," was much criticised by opponents of the League, as all of President Wilson's statements with respect to the League have been, for its lack of definiteness.

OBJECTIONS NOT MET.

The President is accused of dealing only in generalities and of avoiding answers to specific objections which have been made in the Senate and over the country generally concerning provisions of the covenant regarded as inimical to the best interests of the United States and to conflict with some of its traditional policies.

When the President reaches the United States a concerted, vigorous and persistent attempt will be made by the opponents of the league to get from him specific answers to the questions which they have ready. He will not be heckled in the Senate, but when he starts on his tour of the country his trail will be followed by leading Republican orators of the Senate who will make a determined effort to pin him down to particulars.

SEVEN QUESTIONS FRAMED.

Among the questions to which answers will be demanded will be these:

"Under Article 10, is it not true that the youth of the United States can and will be conscripted whenever the League of Nations shall determine that the forces of the United States are needed in any part of the world to control a situation which threatens the peace of the world?"

"Is it not true that, although the league covenant specifically provides for disarmament, Great Britain, France and Japan have increased their armaments since the signing of the armistice and are all preparing for further increases?"

BRITAIN'S NAVAL POWER.

"Is it not true that Great Britain refused to adhere to the doctrine of 'freedom of the seas,' and has announced her intention of maintaining a navy that will at all times be capable of controlling the seas against any combination of powers in the world?"

"Is it not true that under the League of Nations covenant the United States undertakes to underwrite all of the territorial aggrandizement of Great Britain, France and Japan through the treaty?"

"Is it not true that by the treaty, the United States consents to Japan's annihilation of the Shantung Peninsula, on of the richest of Chinese provinces?"

"Is it not true that by the terms of the treaty the United States will be prevented from lending any kind of aid to the achievement of Ireland's independence?"

"Is it not true that the questions of immigration and racial discrimination under the terms of the covenant may come within the jurisdiction of the League and that the colored races of the world having a preponderance of votes in the League may be able to determine this question in a way which will upset the settled policy of the United States in this matter?"

PRACTICAL SIDE NOT IGNORED.

Because the President appeals for the treaty, and particularly the League of Nations covenant, in a great idealistic in character, it is a great mistake to imagine that the President has ignored the practicalities of the situation, at least so far as ratification is concerned.

He is not relying entirely upon Utopian sentiment to bring about ratification. Apparently he has achieved what has heretofore been regarded as the impossible—he has convinced both capital and labor that the interests of each only can be fully subserved by the carrying out of his world policy.

There is no doubt, whatever, that he expects both of these classes to exert great pressure upon the Senate for the ratification of the treaty. In private conversations, Senators who are supporting the treaty and also Senators who are party to the fight against it, admit this. Opponents of the treaty have not seen fit to talk about this fact in the Senate, but they are talking very much about it and very strongly about it in private, and are declaring it to be one of the most disturbing phases of the situation.

APPEAL MADE TO LABOR.

In his message, addressed to his countrymen, President Wilson dwelt upon the fact that the treaty furnishes guarantees such as were never given or even contemplated before for the fair treatment of all who labor at the daily tasks of the world," and he said that it was for this reason that he had spoken of it as a "great charter for a new order of affairs."

The President has made frequent references to the benefits which he asserts will come to labor by the operation of the covenant. The overwhelming vote by which the American Federation of Labor indorsed the covenant shows that these appeals have been effective. He has not said anything about the benefits to capital, and not much has been said about that anywhere—not even in the Senate—publicly, but the Senators are by no means ignorant of the benefits which capital expects to derive.

GREAT BANKERS INTERESTED.

Some of the great bankers of New York have publicly stated that, in addition to the great gains which the United States government and banking interests have already advanced to Europe, many billions more must be advanced if Europe is to be put squarely on her industrial feet. This additional help, it is said, must be given to Europe in order to secure the investments already made. But the investments already made can be made secure and additional investments of billions guaranteed, there will be a golden harvest for the financiers of the United States. They see the opportunities for this harvest and they are anxious to garner it.

The possibilities stagger the imagination, when stated in terms of dollars. For instance, Professor Joseph M. Goldstein says that Russia alone needs $56,450,000,000 for railroad construction, industries and public utilities in the next ten years. There are also great opportunities for investment in Germany, in Austria, in Serbia, in Rumania, in France, in Italy and in the new nations of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

VAST SUMS INVOLVED.

Already the leading bankers in the United States have started to organize the financial interests of the country to furnish these vast sum of money which Europe needs for its rehabilitation. If, however, these great sums needed in Europe are to be furnished by the United States, the financiers demand that their investments shall be made secure. And that is where the League of Nations comes in.

and busy hour the streets were filled with thousands of the curious anxious to get a better glimpse of the men who evaded the British cordon to reach the United States than they were able to obtain at Fenway Park yesterday.

EXERCISES IN COUNCIL.

A police detail in command of Chief of Police John J. McBride kept in order the thousands who clamored for a closer view of the Irish leader. The party was first escorted into Mayor Quinn's office by City Messenger J. Frank Montgomery, and from there was conveyed to the City Council chamber by Councilmen Goode, Bradley and Lehan. Rev. Father Ryan of St. Paul's Church made the invocation.

President James T. Barrett of the Council spoke briefly, and Mayor Quinn officially welcomed the Irish President. President De Valera replied, saying: "No compromise could be made impelling Irish nationality and complete freedom." As he finished speaking Rev. Michael J. O'Connor, chaplain of the old 101st Infantry, entered the room and was cheered.

All present joined in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save Ireland," and the presidential party left for the waiting machines. Before going on to Concord, President De Valera went to St. John's Church in North Cambridge to speak to several hundred children gathered there to hear him.

After the reception President De Valera and party were taken in automobiles through Concord and Lexington and to those spots in Cambridge commemorative of America's struggle for liberty 15 0years ago. The Irish president, whose government is still almost nebulous and whose authority is as yet not officially recognized by a single nation outside his own, was visibly affected as he stood before these hallowed landmarks of a revolution that was successful.

ADDRESSES LEGISLATORS.

And, he was careful to point out to those with him, America's revolution, even though staged thousands of miles from the foreign oppressor, was successful partly because of the generous intereference of a third power, France. He expressed confidence that the land of Washington would be equally generous in this enlightened era toward another struggling people.

The party had dinner at Hivarbank Court, Cambridge, with Mayor Quinn and his municipal cabinet, and shortly afterward President De Valera left the House of Representatives, the first legislative body to hear him since his advent in America.

After his address to the legislators President De Valera was taken in hand by Governor Bartlett.

FINLAND DOCKS WITH 3,655 MEN FROM FRANCE

Yankee Division Represented on Transport; Big Welcome in Harbor

The United States army transport Finland, with 164 officers and 3,491 men, arrived from Brest at the United States army base, South Boston, today. She brought the Third Cavalry, three battalions and the headquarters company of the 78th Field Artillery and a number of smaller detachments and casuals, some of the latter being members of the Yankee Division who have been in hospitals or on special duty in France.

Among the casual detachments were twenty-five college professors and teachers who have been in charge of schools abroad under the Army Educational Corps.

The ship docked amid much blowing of horns and whistles, and the interest of the men on the ship was immediately arrested by the performance of Miss Paulina Polger of Braintree who did a dancing act on the wharf to music by the navy yard band.

The Y. D. men on the Finland were Joseph Jason, 101st Engineers, New Bedford; Frank Rogers, 101st Infantry, East Boston; Fred T. Taylor, 102d Infantry, New Bedford; John Abitti, 101st Engineers, Boston; John Galvin, 101st Infantry, Charlestown; Anton Wingren, 104th Infantry, South Boston; Frank Godbout, 101st Field Artillery, Cambridge; Dominick Draffone, 101st Infantry, Boston; Stephan Cuneo, 101st Infantry, Everett; Fred T. Allies Advise Turk Peace Delegation to Depart From Paris

By International News Service.

Paris, June 30. — Declaring that nothing can be gained by their presence here under present conditions, the Turkish peace envoys today were counselled to leave Paris by the allies. The following note was handed to the Turkish plenipotentiaries:

"The principal allied and associated powers desire to thank the Turkish delegation for the statements which they requested permission to lay before the peace conference. These statements have received and will continue to receive the careful consideration which they deserve. But their touch on other interests besides those of Turkey and they raise international questions whose immediate decision is unfortunately impossible.

"Although, therefore the council are most anxious to proceed rapidly with the final settlement of peace, and fully realize the inconvenience of prolonging the present period of uncertainty, an exhaustive survey of the situation has convinced them that some delay is inevitable.

"They feel that, in these circumstances, nothing would be gained by a longer stay in Paris at the present time of the Turkish delegation, which the Turkish government requested leave to send to France. Though, when the period arrives at which for her an interchange of ideas seems likely to be profitable, they (the allies and associated powers) will fail to communicate with the Turkish government as to the best method by which this result may be conveniently and rapidly accomplished."

"Battle for Liberty and Honor Lost," Say Old German Junkers

By International News Service.

Berlin, June 29, via London, June 30. —The peace treaty signed on Saturday at Versailles was attacked in a proclamation issued by the German National People's party here today.

"The battle for German liberty and honor is lost," said the proclamation. "We want this disgrace to remain unforgotten through generation after generation. The peace can create only hatred. The terms are unfulfillable." The proclamation concluded with the expression that it could never be a "living, true peace."

(The German National People's party is made up of Prussian conservatives and represents the old junker or war clique.)

Lexington, June 30.—According to a letter just received from the American Bankers' Association by Edwin B. This will be done by the bank during July, when the verification of pass books will also take place.

De Valera Pays Tribute to Hearst News Organization

Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Republic, paid a tribute to the Hearst news-gathering organization yesterday in his speech at Fenway Park, when he told of an interview he gave to an American newspaperman in Dublin while the British secret service were seeking unsuccessfully to arrest him.

This interview was given on the day President Wilson arrived in Boston and spoke at Mechanics Hall. In the course of his speech, President Wilson said that "America was the hope of the world."

President De Valera said yesterday that on that same day at almost the same hour he was telling an American newspaperman that "America was the hope of the world."

The American newspaperman to whom President De Valera gave this interview was a reporter from the Universal Service, a Hearst news-gathering organization.

That interview was published exclusively in Boston in the Boston American of that date.

Yesterday President De Valera said:

"By a curious coincidence on the very day and practically at the same hour that your President was using the words, 'America is the hope of the world,' in your hall here in Boston, I was using the same words to an American reporter who had sought me out in Dublin to interview me, when the English detectives could not find me."

IRISH QUESTIONAIRE FOR LIQUOR BUYERS

plained, was meant the sale of spirituous and vinous liquors. It was understood that the department would not be so quick to act in cases involving the sale of beer, and will be satisfied to wait until the status of brewed beverages has been determined.

War Department officials refused to speculate today upon the date when it will be possible to say the army has been demobilized. The make-up of the army with its drafted men, National Guardsmen and regulars, together with volunteers for the "duration of the emergency" and for various periods, is so complicated that it was said the question as to when demobilisation had been terminated probably would have to be decided by legal experts.

It was expected that the point would be ruled on by the attorney-general.

Meanwhile, with the enforcement code not yet enacted, the Anti-Saloon League contended that the original law carried sufficient provision for its enforcement in the interim.

"If the liquor men violate the war prohibition act they do so at their own peril," was the warning issued by Dr. E. C. Dinwiddie, legislative superintendent of the league.

The league will seek to have the enforcement code made more drastic by amendment of the provision allowing liquor to be stored in homes, it was revealed today in a statement by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the league.

"The proposed provision for an unlimited amount of liquor to be permanently stored in the home is unwise," he declared. "It will turn many homes into speak-easies, because the home is exempted from the search and seizure clause entirely unless it is in part a store or boarding house. The proposed code does not authorize the search of a house even if it is proven that liquor is sold therein.

"This provision should be changed so as to limit the amount of liquor possessed or the time of its possession."

Dark, Dark the Day for John Barleycorn Dies Before Morning

"Oh, dark, dark, irrecoverably dark, total eclipse, without an hope today." Paraphrase of Milton's Samson Agonistes.

Yes, gents, dark indeed the day, for tomorrow this ancient city becomes as dry as arid Sahara.

And no hope looms. The ban goes on at midnight. Old John Barleycorn and his companions, Johnnie Ale, Jimmie Beer and Agnes Wines breathe their last.

'Tis sad but true, for even the regulars about town, the men who have had their daily nip for years unnumbered, can see no hope of license being restored for months and months of dry, comfortless days.

But before the demise of old John Barleycorn, Boston's devotees of the cup that cheers, but does not inebriate, are going to have one last fling, one last protest against the decree that banishes wet goods.

Seats at the best hotels are at a premium for the last celebration and funeral of John Barleycorn. Special programs have been arranged. Mournful toasts have been composed. Shivery music will play the requiem.

A few days ago a wise cabinet conceived of real prohibition have made dire threats of continuing to do business. But the saloon liquor dealers have an a body decided to comply with the law and close the saloons and hotel bars.

But with these brave souls wisdom will lie in discretion, for Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley has decreed that dire punishment will follow the dealer who makes anything in the way of a "Blind Tiger" tomorrow.

So, gents, make merry while you may, for it's all off at midnight tonight.

"And when like her, O Saki, you shall pass
Among the guests star-scattered on the grass,
And in your joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made one—turn down an empty pot."

New York Liquor Men in Conference to Decide Upon Future Action

New York, June 30.—Liquor dealers of New York held a big "war" conference today, at which representatives representing various liquor interests took part. At this conference it was to be decided whether or not liquor would be sold after midnight tonight.

Today's conference was concerned chiefly the retailers, meaning the saloon keepers, hotel men and proprietors of various resorts whose chief income is from the sale of liquor.

There is a possibility that the conference will result in a decision by the liquor men to continue the sale of light wines and beer just as though no ban had ever been placed thereupon.

Practically all the big New York hotels have decided to obey the law. There will be no sales of wine or effective provision for its enforcement.

It has been learned that the beer spigots will be turned no more after midnight tonight. Many restaurants and hotels appear determined to continue the sale of beer and wine if the purchaser buys a sandwich or other food. There is little prospect that whiskey and other hard liquor will be on sale tomorrow.

However, the decision taken by the Liquor Association this afternoon will be quite generally followed throughout New York. In all the big cafes preparations were being made for it very hot time in the old town tonight. The police are bracing themselves for the final shock and there will be reserves on hand to calm all celebrants.

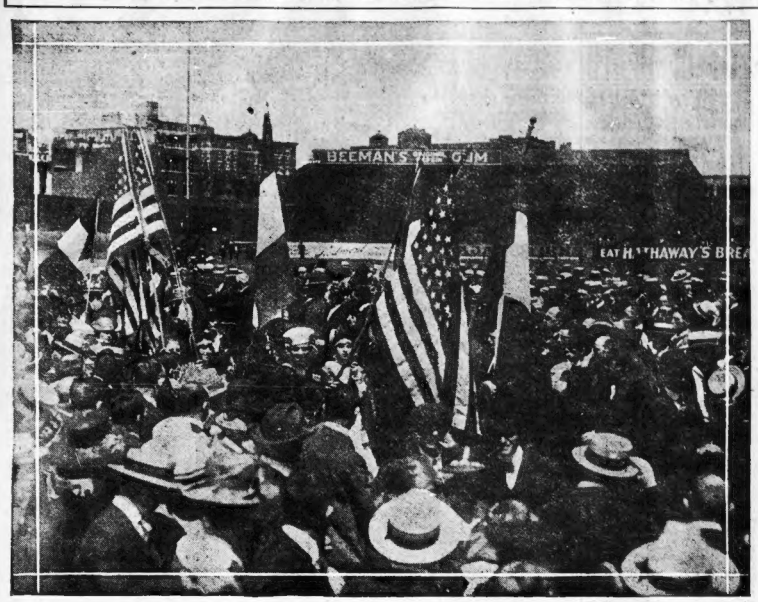
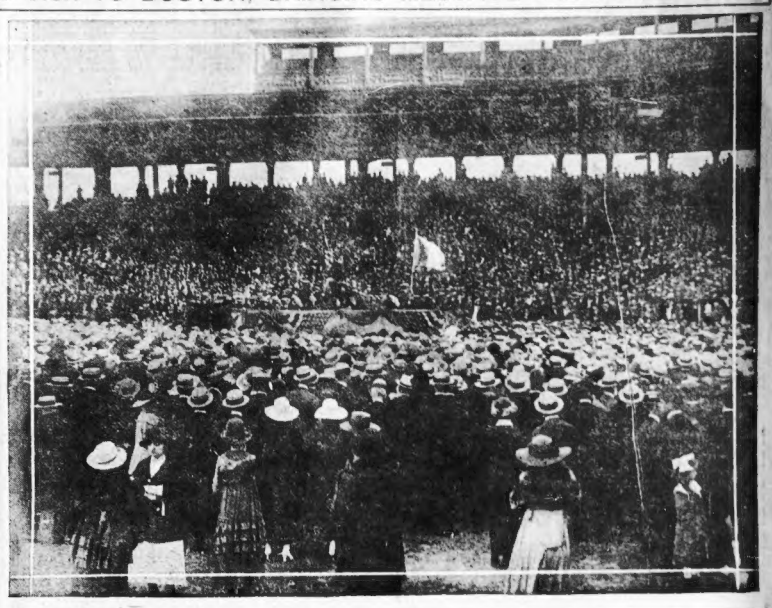
SCENES DURING PRESIDENT DE VALERA'S HISTORIC VISIT TO BOSTON, BRINGING MESSAGE FROM ERIN





65,000 AT FENWAY PARK TO WELCOME DE VALERA

Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Republic by the grace of the votes of the people and the inability of the British government to lay hands on him, was accorded a welcome at Fenway Park such as has not been seen in this generation given to any stranger within the gates of this city.

The arrival of the Irish chief and his reception and address at the Copley-Plaza Hotel had given the leaders among Irish-Americans a chance to meet him, but his appearance in the big ball field was the first opportunity for the mass of the people to pay him tribute, and they did it, to the number of 65,000.

An audience characteristically Irish in enthusiasm and American in almost every sense jammed the available spaces of the big park near the speakers' platform. There were thousands perhaps, who did not hear the speeches but they "listened" through the speaking program that lasted from 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon until 6. They never for a moment lost the infectious, high spirited enthusiasm.

WOMEN FAINT.

The welcome accorded De Valera, acclaimed as the savior of the Emerald Isle, brought tears to the eyes of the Irish chief. He was visibly moved but kept his pose and recovered spontaneously from the remarkable reception which he received.

"Up De Valera," "God Save the Irish Republic," "God Save Old Ireland," were cries heard on every hand. To the accompaniment of these and similar cries the human mass of cheering, high-frantic people surged forward. It looked as if the stand on which the Irish President stood, his tall form dressed in black and silhouetted against a June blue sky, would be swept from under his very feet. The surging throng sweeping closer to him almost crushed one another. At least a score of women fainted or were overcome. A dozen women at least had to be lifted on to the platform, where they were revived.

The human overpouring caused the cordons of foot and mounted police to use every effort to relieve the strain. In the aisles and between the long rows of seats the eager throng crowded. Boston bestowed a big Irish heart on De Valera and, as the Irish chief said after the meeting, he will leave a big piece of his own heart here when he departs.

IRISH FLAGS WAVE.

The "cead mile failte"—hundred thousand welcomes—were extended to De Valera in a hundred ways. With the entrance of the chief, who passed through a lane of people opened up by the mounted police, cheering began. Thousands of flags of the Sinn Fein tri-color of green, white and orange, waved frantically in the hands of men, women and children.

Mayor Quinn of Cambridge called for three cheers for the President of the Irish Republic as Dr. De Valera appeared, and three cheers were given three times over and then some more. Rev. Father Phillip O'Donnell, pastor of St. James' Church, opened the great meeting with an address. "Thanks be to God for this day which is so near to the day of Justice for Ireland," said the priest. Father O'Donnell also brought to the meeting the felicitations of Cardinal O'Connell who, but for his presence in Chicago, would have been present.

Daniel H. Coakley, representing the bench and bar committee of the Irish Victory Fund which arranged the demonstration, introduced Thomas H. Mahoney as permanent chairman of the meeting. Mr. Mahoney said that in the same sense as great men of a former day had pleaded for the cause of Ireland so did Professor De Valera appear in Boston.

GOVERNOR SENT REGRETS.

Governor Coolidge, who was ill and out of town, sent a letter through T. A. Fitzgerald regretting his absence. In his letter the Governor referred to the Irish President as the "Honorable Eamon De Valera." Neither the Governor or Mayor Peters referred to Professor De Valera as the President of the Irish Republic. The Governor wrote that he believed it is the duty of America to help those countries which helped her in her hour of need.

While Mayor Peters was addressing the throng and several other times during the great mass meeting former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell found it necessary to urge the crowd to press back. His words were accepted good-naturedly but little headed and with every succeeding burst of applause the throng surged forward, almost imperilling those on the speakers' rostrum. Enthusiasm grew as the meeting progressed. Of course the big demonstration was made when De Valera himself spoke, but next to him the one who received the greatest ovation was that given to Harry J. Boland, the secretary who worked his way to this country as a stoker.

PASS RESOLUTIONS.

All the speakers were greeted with enthusiasm. They were Senator David I. Walsh, Mayor Peters, Mayor Quinn, Joseph F. O'Connell, Congressman Eugene F. Kinckid of New Jersey, John H. H. McNamee and Thomas H. Mahoney.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the meeting:

Resolved: That we return thanks to the United States Senate for their American patriotic and sympathetic action in instructing the American delegates at Paris to bring the case of Ireland, through its representatives, to the Peace Conference, that her case may be heard.

Resolved: That we declare ourselves unreservedly in favor of the independence of Ireland and demand that our government recognize the Irish Republic.

Resolved: That we register our opposition to any proposed League of Nations which does not protect all American rights and ideals and which binds us to guarantee the territorial integrity of the British and Japanese Empires.

America Alone Can Save Fruits of the War for Democracy, Says Valera

Preceding his address with a few words spoken in the Gaelic language, De Valera, said:

"Gaels and Friends of the Gael:

"I speak to you in the tongue of the Gael, that tongue carried in itself the greeting I bring from the white hills of Ireland.' I regret that my voice does not carry to the limits of this meeting because I would like every one here to hear that greeting which I know would touch a responsive chord in every one of your hearts.

"They told us during the war that we had lost the sympathy of America (cries of liars). Like yourselves, I never mince words and told them, as you, that they lied. I knew that the people of your land showed the way to the peoples of the world to true liberty. I knew that the land in which I had the honor to be born was not going to misunderstand the struggles of a people fighting against tyranny far greater than had been charged against Germany.

"When an opportunity came, I came to you, as I came to the people of Clare after my liberation from prison. England had branded us as criminals. England said that even our own people despised us as traitors to Ireland.

DECRIES POLITICS.

"I answered that I for one was willing to be judged by the Irish people and that if they called us traitors I would accept their judgement and hang my head in shame. You know what the verdict of Clare was and I think I shall carry back the same verdict from America.

"No! I do not for a moment believe that America will make a shuttle cock of our cause, to pass it from party to party. (Cries of 'We will make a shuttle cock of the Democratic party.')

"Americans may differ in their home politics but they are united in the cause of liberty. I come to your grand free land not by any means to make the Irish question a party question in your politics here. It will not become a party question, or, if it does, only in the sense that both parties will vie with each other to see which can best help Ireland to her liberty.

"I shall not attempt to plead Ireland's case now. It was sweet to my ears to hear the cause of Ireland pleaded thus by Americans. When I go through this country I hope I shall continue to hear the cause of Ireland pleaded everywhere by Americans and that I shall only be called upon to represent Ireland by my physical presence.

"I am going to read this statement to you, because of the danger of being misquoted. This danger is made clear to me by the quotation of one of our speakers taken from the press and widely circulated that after I had been arrested I said:

"'Shoot me if you will, but spare my men.'

"I never made such a statement. I would not have insulted my men by asking England to spare them. I said, 'Arrange for my men.' I was negotiating the surrender at the time.

HISTORY REPEATING.

"Advocating the cause that I advocate here in Boston in the very cradle of liberty, it requires somewhat of an effort on my part to refrain from making a parallel with those events so closely associated with your city and so nearly parallel to present events in Ireland and the cause for which I am here seeking your support.

"I do refrain, however, not only because I believe that these parallels are already vividly before your minds and in your consciousness, but because I believe that no appeal to your feelings or your sympathies could make your hearts more with us than they are.

"Instead of carrying you back a period of 150 years, I shall then direct your attention to the immediate present moment and its possibilities, a moment which, if the American people will it, can be made as great a land mark in the history of progress and civilization as were the events of 1776.

USED WILSON'S WORDS.

"By a curious coincidence on the very day and practically at the same hour that your President was using the words, 'America is the hope of the world,' in your hall here in Boston, I was using the same words to an American reporter who had sought me out in Dublin to interview me, when the English detectives could not find me.

"I gave reasons, too, for my opinion. I pointed out that considering all the circumstances, America alone of all the powerful nations was in a position to take that calm detached look which was absolutely essential if the world was not to be thrown back once more into the old system of secret diplomacy and intrigue of selfish alliances and balances which have never ceased to breed war and misery and which culminated in the world conflict through which we have been passing.

IN A WORLD CRISIS.

"Now, the thought which I expressing on that occasion was the thought practically of every man and woman in Ireland and not merely for the selfish reason that America was the hope of Ireland in particular but because Irish people are a spiritual people with interests second to none in humanity's future.

"I believe there is no nation in this world more keenly alive to the supreme issues for mankind involved in the Paris negotiations. We in Ireland realize that if the wrong turning be now taken, if violence be re-established in its former supremacy as the final sanction, humanity is faced with a period of misery for which history hitherto has no parallel.

"The burdens of taxation due to the debts incurred in the war, the cost of competitive armaments, and the old diplomatic intrigues, will lead inevitably to the internal upheavals of states, that is, to anarchy and civil wars—a whole series of irregular wars vastly more terrible than the huge organized conflict now ended.

"Peace was nominally signed between the two great combating alies yesterday. I understand. Peace! Peace that gives us twenty new wars instead of one that it nominally ends. And this is the peace treaty the world has been asked to look forward to as the treaty that would end wars and establish a stable, lasting peace.

"Does it not seem already a mockery—and a mockery it will remain unless America takes up the responsibility for the moral leadership of the world, for her own splendid traditions no less than the aims she set herself in entering this war enables her. That headship at this moment is freely offered to her by the common sense and common conscience of mankind.

IS LAST OPPORTUNITY.

"The present opportunity is never likely to recur again. The idea of a community of nations recognizing law and a common right ending war amongst nations as municipal law has ended private wars amongst individuals is today a possibility if America does what the people of the world—the honest, the plain people your President spoke of—pray and expect America will do. To lose this moment would be a disaster that it will be impossible to repair.

"The moral propaganda carried on during the war, the doctrines of right and liberty and justice that were enunciated, even though the motives of some of the spokesmen may have been hypocritical have still done their work. The world is prepared and is ready. The minds and hearts of men made peculiarly receptive by the circumstances of sadness and misery surrounding the teaching were deeply impressed by the truths they were being taught.

DEMOCRACY DIES.

"The seed fell on loosened, freshened soil. Will America allow the fruit of such a propitious sowing to remain ungathered or precariously lost by a neglectful harvest? America alone can save it. She alone has the strength if she has, as we who took to her believe she has, the will. If America disappoints then the right-minded, the good, the just in the world will be thrown back to a sullen and cynical despair. Democracy dies or else goes mad.

"A new 'Holy Alliance' cannot save democracy—a just League of Nations founded on the only basis on which it can be just—the equality of right amongst nations small no less than great—can.

"America can see to it that such a League is set up and set up now. She is strong enough to do so and it is her right consequent on the appliett terms on which she entered the war. She will be backed up by the right minded of the whole world, by all but some scheming diplomats or the financial interests that back them. Let her lead—true democracy will organize itself the world over to press on to salvation and happiness behind her.

ADOPTED WILSON'S IDEALS.

"We in Ireland watched with keen interest every development. Our struggle object alone we came out of prison has been to put Ireland in the proud position she now occupies, a definite claimant for her full rights ready to enter the world family of nations. I will read for you an extract from our Parliamentary debate on the League of Nations. It is a motion that was carried unanimously and ordered to be sent to your President:

"That the elected Parliament and government of the Irish Republic pledge the entire support of the Irish nation in translating into deeds the principles enunciated by the President of the United States at Washington's tomb on July 4, 1918, and whole-heartedly accepted by the people of America during the war.

"We are eager and ready to enter a world League of Nations based on an equality of right in which the guarantees exchanged neither oppressive nor imply a difference between big nations and small, between those that are powerful and those that are weak. We are willing to accept all the duties, responsibilities and burdens which inclination in such a League implies.'

"Ireland offers herself unreservedly to that cause. Let America and America's President take the forfeiture that rats clearly indicates for them, accomplish and save the world. A League of Nations can be framed in Washington as well as in Paris. Now is the time to frame it. It is not enough to destroy—you must build. The material and the strategic object alone we came out of artificers are in abundance."

Irish Crowds Burn British Flags in Dundalk Riot

London, June 30.—A soldiers' peace celebration at Dundalk, Ireland, broke up in a riot when crowds rushed the celebrating English troops and seized and burned a number of British flags. Cheers were given for President De Valera. Troops finally cleared the streets, using bayonets.

FORMER MRS. SKEELS CONFRONTS NURSE

STATE SPRINGS SURPRISE IN LAWRENCE POISON TRIAL

woman leaned heavily on crutches. She approached the witness stand.

CONFRONTED WITH CRIPPLE.

The white-faced defendant, a marvel of self-control, looked the black-gowned woman in the face. The crippled woman steadily returned the glance. A yip falling would have been heard in the courtroom.

"Do you know this woman?" asked the Attorney-General.

"I can't see from this distance," replied Mrs. Lundgren.

"Please come nearer," said Mr. Attwill to the woman.

Hobbling on her crutches, the black-gowned woman moved closer to Mrs. Lundgren.

"She is Mrs. Frank Skeels, isn't she?" asked Mr. Attwill.

"She is the woman I knew as Mrs. Frank Skeels," calmly replied Mrs. Lundgren.

"That's all," said Mr. Attwill, and Mrs. Lundgren's merciless grilling under the electric light was over at exactly five minutes past the noon hour.

A moment later Mrs. Lundgren's counsel, Mr. Daley, introduced a paper in his attempt to prove Mrs. Lundgren right before the world. It purported to be the certified copy of a divorce secured by Nellie B. Skeels and given to the defendant by Mr. Skeels before their marriage in 1910.

WOMAN'S CONDITION BETTER.

Mrs. Lundgren began the fourth and last week of her trial in better condition than at any time since she submitted herself to the ordeal. She showed no ill effects of her weakening of last week, but to the contrary seemed to have stored up a surplus of reserve strength during her rest of three days.

Her pillows were comfortably arranged by court officers and her feet placed in a foot-rest, before Attorney-General Attwill was allowed to take the witness. He immediately opened a cross-fire of questions regarding the origin and disposition of certain articles which the State has all along maintained the "Sunshine Nurse" pilfered from the Gay home.

These articles included the squirrel furs made by Weiner of Boston, which Mrs. Lundgren said she took them to the furrier after she received them from her mother and that she had bought them in either Cleveland or Columbus.

NURSE PAID BY CHECK.

In answer to a question, Mrs. Lundgren said that she was paid in the Gay household by check, and that she received $18 a week from Mrs. Gay for it.

"There was never any trouble about it, after I explained," she said.

Q—Do you recall Mrs. Ripley telling you that there was a forged check, and that you said you thought you wouldn't be there much longer?

A—I don't recall. She said that they had found the burglars, and I said I didn't know that there had been burglars.

Q—Did Miss Gay have a piano?

A—Yes.

Q—Did she play?

A—Beautifully.

Q—Did you at any time observe losing Mrs. Gay to Hanover with you?

A—I did not.

The witness said that Nellie Jones was her niece that she lived in New York, but that she had not seen her for five years.

Q—Did you tell Mr. Daley that Mrs. Lucy told Dr. Walker to leave the house?

A—I did not know it until I heard Mr. Daley it here.

Q—You referred to a cash book that you kept. Did you leave that with your pocketbook in the Gay house?

A—I left no things there for I was expecting to return there until the following Thursday.

ADMITS HAVING WALKED.

Q—When you first saw Mr. Wilkins in New Jersey you told her that Bert was going to die?

A—I told her what the doctors said, but I don't think I told her that that first day.

Q—Did you ever show her a check for the sale of a diamond for $65 was recorded?

A—Never; I never did.

Q—When you got the Fowler's solution you had it written on a piece of brighton blanch, belonging to Dr. Brennan, didn't you?

A—I can't remember.

Q—Where did you get the blank?

A—I think perhaps it was a blank the doctor had left before or I wrote on it as a memorandum.

Q—Did you tell your counsel that you gave the trial at this time you'd go into court?

A—I said I'd try.

Q—Have you walked at all?

A—A few steps, holding on to things.

Q—Haven't you sat on the piazza other night?

A—No, sir. You never come downstairs except when I be carried.

TIES EATING TALCUM.

Q—When you were in the hospital didn't Dr. Mahahan kind to you?

A—He was.

Q—Weren't you eating talcum under when you were there?

A—I ate talcum. Never.

Q—Didn't you eat talcum and didn't take it away from you?

A—Did not. Dr. Jones, Youngstown, Ohio?

A—I was back and forth there.

Q—Didn't you live with Frank Skeels there as Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Judy?

A—I never did.

Q—Didn't you live with Mr. Skeels in 1896 as his wife?

A—I have asked some papers and I have informed my counsel that the date of my marriage to Mr. Skeels was July 27, 1901.

Q—You looked that up as the result of something your counsel told you?

A—I looked it up because I was in doubt about dates.

Q—So you never lived with Frank Skeels as husband and wife for thirteen years before he died?

A—No, it was about seven and a half years.

Q—Wasn't Frank Skeels a widower?

A—He was a divorced man.

Q—Didn't he get his divorce sometime in 1901?

A—May I explain? I didn't get that divorce. He got a pap.-ss.

OF MARRIAGE.

...ve you a marriage certificate?

A—No. I have not.

...re you sure you were ever ...d to Skeels?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—Can you say where you were married to Skeels?

A—It was somewhere out in the suburbs of Manchuria.

Q—Did you know the first Mrs. Skeels?

A—I don't know that she was ever married to him.

Q—Didn't you use to ask her to your house and call her Mrs. Skeels?

A—I used to until my people heard things.

Q—Mr. Skeels left Paterson in 1896, didn't he?

A—I'm not sure.

Q—Didn't you live in Paterson in 1896 with Mr. Skeels?

A—I did not, sir.

Attorney-General Attwill called a court officer and said: "Now if Mrs. Dewolf is here, and then there was a stir through the courtroom.

Mr. Daley objected to further questions on the part of the attorney-general at this time and the objection was over-ruled by the court.

Court officers then approached, supporting between them a middle-aged woman, dressed in black, and leaning heavily on crutches. She approached the witness stand. The white-faced defendant, with a quiver, looked the black-gowned woman in the face. The black-gowned woman, quietly, steadily returned the glance.

Q—Do you know this woman?

A—I can't see from this distance.

ATTWILL SPRINGS SURPRISE.

The attorney-general asked the woman to draw nearer, and she stepped forward, leaning on crutches still more.

Q—Do you know this woman?

A—She is the woman that was the bookkeeper at the Singer Sewing Machine Company in Paterson.

Q—She is Mrs. Frank Skeels, isn't she?

A—She is the woman I knew as Mrs. Frank Skeels.

The crippled woman was then assisted back to a chair, and the line of questions was resumed.

Q—Did you ever have any talk with Mrs. Skeels that led you to believe she was not his wife?

A—No.

Q—You had a talk with Mr. Daley yesterday?

A—No, sir.

Q—Did you talk to him on Saturday?

A—Yes.

Q—Did you tell you the former Mrs. Skeels was in the vicinity?

A—No, one told me.

Q—You said you saw Skeels in Youngstown?

A—At times.

Q—Did you report to his place of business

A—No, sir.

Witness said she did not know that Skeels was in business and that he never told her about it. She said she didn't know that he had a vending machine company there. She would not say that she was living in Youngstown on the last part of 1900.

Q—How long after you got to Cleveland did you meet Skeels?

A—Some length of time. I don't know.

NURSED IN THE WEST.

The witness said she told Mr. Daley that Mrs. Luce had packed Miss Sarah Gay's bag the day of Miss Gay's funeral and told her to go home, because Miss Sarah had told her so. She said that she did not say that Mrs. Luce prevented Mrs. Gay from making a will.

Q—You did considerable nursing in the West?

A—Now and then to time.

Q—You mentioned Miss Kennedy and Miss Brady. Were you with them as nurses?

A—Miss Kennedy was a nurse and I assisted her. I was with Miss Brady more as a companion.

The witness said she did not know of any diamond ring that Miss Gay owned and that she had seen a scroll diamond ring in the possession of Mrs. Gay. She failed to identify a picture submitted to her, because her eyes were weak. "It looks like Miss Gay," she said.

Q—There's no question but you sent a trunk by express from the Gay home December 18, 1917. There's no question but you sent a trunk. I don't remember the date.

Witness said she recalled sending another trunk in February, 1918, and that in that were some tools of her husband.

"That's all," concluded the Attorney-General at 12.05 o'clock.

WENT OVER HER PAPERS.

Redirect examination by Attorney Daley began with the question: Did Dr. Monahan ever say anything to you about taking talcum powder?

A—No, sir.

Witness testified that it was at the request of her counsel that she went over her papers, which she kept in a miniature trunk in the top of the bookcase.

Q—As a consequence of this search did you find this paper?

A—I can't see very well, but I recognize the paper.

The paper, the witness said, was one given to her by Mr. Skeels in 1901, previous to her marriage. The paper was a certified copy of a divorce in 1901 secured by Nellie B. Skeels of Fairfield County, Conn., from Frank M. Skeels of Youngstown, Ohio. The paper certified that the marriage of Nellie B. Merritt and Frank M. Skeels occurred on November 24, 1886, and that on April 26, 1901, he deserted her.

Q—It was after the divorce record was handed you by Frank M. Skeels you were married the following July?

A—It was.

Attorney-General Attwill:

Q—When was it you gave that divorce to your counsel?

A—Last Saturday night. I could not find them before then.

Mr. Daley asked Mrs. Lundgren if she was ill on Friday last and if she was unconscious. Attorney-General Attwill objected and the court asked the purpose of the question. "Because my brother claims that the defendant is faking," returned Mr. Daley.

"I have heard no such claim," said the court. "Until I do, I shall exclude it."

Mrs. Lundgren could not recall the name of the clergyman who married her. "It was either MacGregor or MacGregor, I don't know which," she said. "I always remembered it began with Mac."

NEVER MET BUFFALO BILL.

Mr. Daley asked her if she was ever married to Buffalo Bill.

"My brother has mentioned W. F. Cody. Did you ever know him?" he asked.

"I never met him, Mr. Daley," was the reply.

Richard P. Whitton, an Andover carpenter, said he worked in the Gay house and crated a table for Miss Gay, August 13, 1917.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Wright of Andover, the next witness, said "she did a little bit of everything." She said she worked at the Gay house, but never saw Florence Gay.

Q—Do you know anything about the sheets?

A—I know there was not enough to make the students' beds, and Mrs. Skeels said she'd go over to her house and get some. She came back with an armful of them.

Michael J. Scannell, engineer for sixteen years at Abbott Academy, said that he examined the plumbing in the Gay house the November before Miss Gay died.

Q—What were you there for?

A—To measure for a new boiler for the kitchen.

Q—Where was the tank located?

A—In Miss Gay's bedroom closet.

Q—Were the plumbers working there under your direction?

A—Until the day before Miss Coy died.

Q—Did you remember offering Miss Gay any assistance?

A—I remember Mrs. Skeels asking me if I had seen Miss Gay fall. I said I hadn't and asked her if I could assist her. She said no, she had got in her bed.

Julia Nichols, the little Syrian girl to whom the defendant was always the "sunshine nurse," said she had met Mrs. Skeels at a neighbors house.

Q—What did she do for you?

A—She did everything for us, made us clothes and everything.

Q—When there was a parade in Andover, what did you do.

A—Went out of the line and kissed Mrs. Skeels.

KISSES DEFENDANT.

G. the little girl left the stand, she stopped at the side of Mrs. Lundgren's chair kissing her impulsively, the kiss ringing through the room.

Dr. Robert L. Emerson, one of the strongest and a final expert for the defense, qualified as an expert consulting chemist. He is a graduate of Harvard, travelled two years abroad, graduated from Harvard Medical in 1900, spent a year and a half in studying chemistry in Strassburg and Berlin, was for three years assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry in Washington, and during the war was subsistence chief expert of the War Department.

Q—What has been your experience in regard to the finding of arsenic in the human body?

A—In a number of years I have never failed to find traces of it.

Q—How does it get there?

A—In food, drink, clothes and exposure to wall papers.

Q—In what other way have you found arsenic?

A—In mattresses in appreciable quantities.

The witness described the manner analysis is made.

Objection to this line of testimony was made by the Attorney General and the court inquired as to the purpose of this line of inquiry.

"To contradict Dr. Whitney," answered Mr. Daley, and the witness was allowed to continue.

HEARD NURSE CRY OUT.

Charles F. Emerson of Andover, the man at whose house Mrs. Lundgren made her home at the time of her arrest, under cross-examination by Attorney-General Attwill, said that he had talked over the matter of the gascock and the arrest of Mrs. Skeels very little with her attorney, Daniel J. Daley. He said that he had moved a load of furniture from Rye, N. H. for Miss Gay, and that he had slept in the Gay house on occasions and he had been asked to do so by Mrs. Skeels.

Q—Did you hear anything?

A—I heard Mrs. Skeels cry out, and jumped out of bed and ran downstairs. Mrs. Skeels said there was somebody in the next room.

Q—Did you see anyone there?

A—No. I saw a lot of papers scattered around the floor and on the table.

Witness said he didn't think there were any burglars when he went there. He denied that he had told the Grand Jury that the gas cock in the bathroom did not turn very hard, and repeated his testimony of Saturday that there had never been a gas heater attached to that gas cock since it had been placed in the bathroom.

He said he had taken a trunk to the station for Mrs. Skeels when she was going away but could recall nothing about it except it was a steamer trunk.

SMELLED BRANDY, NOT GAS.

Dr. Percy J. Looke, practicing physician of Andover, followed Mr. Emerson on the stand. He said he was called to the Emerson house the morning of the arrest, in 1918.

Q—Did you smell any gas?

A—I did not.

Q—Was there any evidence of gas asphyxiation about Mrs. Skeels?

A—There was not.

Cross-examined, the witness said that Mrs. Skeels was very pale, her eyes closed, breathing quietly, and with rapid pulse.

Q—What did her breath smell of?

A—Brandy.

Q—You said you found a bottle in her room; what did it smell of?

A—It was ¾ half pint bottle and smelled of brandy.

Q—Did she talk?

A—She only mumbled a few words—something about "don't leave me," and then she mumbled a name that I didn't get.

Q—Did you vomit while you were there?

A—Three times.

Q—That could be considered a symptom of gas poisoning, couldn't it?

A—It would be consistent with it.

Q—What did the increase in pulse indicate?

A—It would not be inconsistent with gas poisoning.

Q—Did you think she was unconscious?

A—I didn't know.

Q—Did you think she could speak, but wouldn't?

A—I didn't know.

PILOT OF DEATH PLANE HEARD AT INQUEST

Dorchester Judge Takes Under Advisement Fatalities at Franklin Field

Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Clagett, air service, and several other army aviators testified today at an inquest in Dorchester court into the death of two children killed last week by Colonel Clagett's plane, the "Black Jack," when it alighted at Franklin Field, finishing a flight from Dallas, Tex.

The children were Joseph Benaglia, twelve, of No. 69 Canterbury street, and Beatrice Rosenblatt, twelve, of Glenside street. The machine, piloted by Colonel Clagett, was run into a tree to avoid other children in the crowd surged onto the field.

The case for the Boston police was presented by Inspector James A. Hennessy, while Colonel O. B. Myers put in the army's side. Judge Merritt took the matter under advisement.

In summing up the case for the army, Colonel Myers said that Franklin Field, being a playground, is a bad place for landing and that it is also only a two-way field, being long and narrow. Colonel Clagett, he said, risked his own life in landing as he did, but followed army regulations which are to run a plane into an obstruction rather than into a crowd, and for the aviator to risk his own life rather than that of any spectator.

In the course of the inquest it was announced that James B. Shea, head of the Park and Recreation Department, has issued orders that no more permits be given for airplanes to land at the field. Motorcycle Officer M. J. Fitzgibbons of the Dorchester police station was complimented by the aviators for his coolness and courage at the time of the accident.

TREATY'S FATE DEPENDS UPON FIGHT IN U. S. TO AMEND COVENANT

CENTRE OF ACTION SHIFTS TO SENATE CHAMBER

By JUSTIN McGRATH,
Editorial Correspondent Universal Service.

Washington, June 30.—With the signing of the peace treaty at Versailles and the sailing of President Wilson from Brest, the centre of the world's most important action shifts from Paris to Washington.

The signing of the treaty by the plenipotentiaries of all of the great powers other than the United States practically means its ratification by those powers. The United States will not become a party to the treaty until it shall have been ratified by the Senate, and there is as yet no certainty that it will be ratified by the Senate, at least without reservations, which the other powers may not be able to accept.

It is because of this uncertainty that the interest of the entire world will be fixed on Washington until the United States Senate shall have acted.

OPPOSITION STRENGTHENED.

There is no doubt the signing of the treaty and President Wilson's statement proclaiming it a "charter for a new era of affairs in the world" has strengthened the Senate opposition.

Owing to the declaration made by several Senators who heretofore were regarded as inclined to favor the treaty that they would insist upon some reservations, those who have been consistently opposed to the League of Nations covenant are more confident than ever now that reservations will be made by the Senate which will render the covenant practically innocuous.

President Wilson's cablegram to Secretary Tumulty, addressed to "My Fellow-Countrymen," was much criticised by opponents of the League, as all of President Wilson's statements with respect to the League have been, for its lack of definiteness.

OBJECTIONS NOT MET.

The President is accused of dealing only in generalities and of avoiding answers to specific objections which have been made in the Senate and over the country generally concerning the provisions of the covenant, regarded as inimical to the best interests of the United States and to conflict with some of its traditional policies.

and busy hour the streets were filled with thousands of the curious anxious to get a better glimpse of the men who escaped the British cordon to reach the United States than they were able to obtain at Fenway Park yesterday.

EXERCISES IN COUNCIL.

A police detail in command of Chief of Police John J. McBride kept in order the thousands who clamored for a closer view of the Irish leader. The party was first escorted into Mayor Quinn's office by City Messenger J. Frank Montgomery, and from there was conveyed to the City Council chamber by Councilmen Goode, Bradley and Lehan. Rev. Father Ryan of St. Paul's Church made the invocation.

President James T. Barrett of the Council spoke briefly, and Mayor Quinn officially welcomed the Irish President. President De Valera replied, saying: "No compromise could be made impending Irish nationality and complete freedom." As he finished speaking Rev. Michael J. O'Connor, chaplain of the old 101st Infantry, entered the room and was cheered.

All present joined in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Old Sod Ireland," and the presidential party left for the waiting machines. Before going on to Concord, President De Valera went to St. John's Church in North Cambridge to speak to several hundred children gathered there to hear him.

After the reception President De Valera and party were taken in automobiles through Concord and Lexington and to those spots in Cambridge commemorative of America's struggle for liberty 175 years ago. The Irish president, whose government is still almost nebulous and whose authority is as yet not officially recognized by a single nation outside his own, was visibly affected as he stood before these hallowed landmarks of a revolution that was successful.

ADDRESSES LEGISLATORS.

And, he was careful to point out to those with him, America's revolution, even though staged thousands of miles from the foreign oppressor, was successful partly because of the generous interference of a third power, France. He expressed confidence that the land of Washington would be equally generous in this enlightened day toward another struggling people.

The party had dinner at Riverbank Court, Cambridge, with Mayor Quinn and Lieut.-Governor Cox and shortly afterward President De Valera left to address the House of Representatives, the first legislative body to hear him since his advent in America.

After his address to the legislators President De Valera was taken in hand by Governor Hartley.

IRISH LEADER QUESTIONNAIRE FOR LIQUOR BUYERS

planned, was meant the sale of spirituous and vinous liquors. It was understood that the department would not be so quick to act in cases involving the sale of beer, and will be satisfied to wait until the status of brewed beverages has been determined.

War Department officials refused to speculate today upon the date when it will be possible to say the army has been demobilized. The making up of the army with its drafted men, National Guardsmen and regulars, together with volunteers for the duration of the emergency" and for various periods, is so complicated that it was said the question as to when demobilization had been terminated probably would have to be decided by legal experts.

It was expected that the point would be ruled on by the attorney-general.

Meanwhile, with the enforcement code not yet enacted, the Anti-Saloon League contended that the original law carried sufficient provision for its enforcement in the interim.

"If the liquor men violate the war prohibition law they do so at their own peril," was the warning issued by Dr. C. A. Sumwalt, investigative superintendent of the league.

The league will seek to have the enforcement code made more drastic by amendment of the provision allowing liquor to be stored in homes, it was revealed today in a statement by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the league.

"The proposed provision for an unlimited amount of liquor to be permanently stored in the home is unwise," he declared. "It will turn many homes into speakeasies, because the home is exempted from the search and seizure clauses entirely unless it is part a store or boarding house. The proposed code does not authorize the search of a house even if it is proven that liquor is sold therein.

"This provision should be changed so as to limit the amount of liquor possessed or the time of its possession."

Dark, Dark the Day for John Barleycorn Dies Before Morning

"Oh, dark, dark, irrecoverably dark, total blindness, without all hope today!" Paraphrase of Milton's Samson Agonistes.

Yes, gents, dark indeed the day for tomorrow this ancient city becomes dry as dry as arid Sahara.

And no hope looms. The ban goes on at midnight. Old John Barleycorn and his companions, Johnnie Ale, Jimmie Beer and Agnes Wines breathe their last.

'Tis sad but true, for even the regulars about town, the men who have had their daily sip for years unnumbered, can see no hope of license being restored for months and months to come, perhaps days.

But before the demise of old John Barleycorn Boston's devotees of the can that cheers, but does not inebriate, are going to have one last fling. Long ere the midnight hour the decree that banishes wet goods

Seats at the best hotels are at a premium for the last solemn dance and funeral of John Barleycorn. Special programs have been arranged. Mournful tunes have been composed. Shivery music will play the requiem.

A few brave souls who cannot conceive of real prohibition have made dire threats of continuing to do business. But the Boston liquor dealers have as a body decided to comply with the law and close the saloons and hotel bars.

But with these brave souls wisdom will rule in discretion, for Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley has declared that dire punishment will follow the dealer who starts anything in the way of a "Blind Tiger" tomorrow.

So, gents, make merry while you may, for it's all off at midnight tonight.

"And when like her, O Saki, you shall pass
Among the guests star-scattered on the grass
And in your joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made one—turn down an empty pot."

New York Liquor Men in Conference to Decide Upon Future Action

New York, June 30.—Liquor dealers of New York held a big "war" conference this afternoon, in which attorneys representing various liquor interests took part. At this conference it was to be decided whether or not liquor would be sold after midnight tonight.

Today's conference centered chiefly the retailers, meaning the saloon keepers, hotel men and proprietors of restaurants whose chief income is from the sale of liquor.

There is a possibility that the conference will result in a decision by the liquor men to continue the sale of light wines and beer just as though no ban had ever been placed thereon.

Practically all the big New York hotels have decided to obey the law, though they believe there are no effective provision for its enforcement. They have agreed to the word that the beer spigots will be turned no more after midnight tonight. Many restaurants and bars appear determined to continue the sale of beer and wine if the customer orders a sandwich or other food, but there is little prospect that whiskey and other hard liquor will be sold tomorrow.

However, the decision taken by the Liquor Association this afternoon will be quite generally followed throughout New York. In all the big cafes preparations were being made for a very hot time in the old town tonight. The police are brazing themselves for the final shock and there will be reserves on hand to calm all celebrants.

(HUNDREDS OF OTHER BARGAIN LOTS)

When the President reaches the United States a concerted, vigorous and persistent attempt will be made by the opponents of the league to get from him specific answers to the questions which they have ready. He will not be heckled in the Senate, but when he starts on his tour of the country his trail will be followed by leading Republican orators of the Senate who will make every possible effort to pin him down to particulars.

SEVEN QUESTIONS FRAMED.

Among the questions to which answers will be demanded will be the following:

"Under Article 10, is it not true that the people of the United States can and will be conscripted whenever the League of Nations shall determine that the forces of the United States are needed in any part of the world to control a situation which threatens the peace of the world?"

"Is it not true that, although the league covenant specifically provides for disarmament, Great Britain, France and Japan have increased their armaments since the signing of the armistice and are all preparing for further increases?"

BRITAIN'S NAVAL POWER.

"Is it not true that Great Britain refused to adhere to the doctrine of 'freedom of the seas,' and has announced her intention of maintaining a navy that will at all times be capable of resisting the combined naval or any combination of powers in the world?"

"Is it not true that under the League of Nations covenant the United States undertakes to help write all of the territorial aggrandizement of Great Britain, France and Japan through the treaty?"

"Is it not true that by the treaty, the United States consents to Japan's spoliation of the Shantung Peninsula, on of the richest of Chinese provinces?"

"Is it not true that by the terms of the treaty the United States will be prevented from lending any kind of aid to the achievement of Ireland's independence?"

"Is it not true that the questions of immigration and racial discrimination under the terms of the covenant may come within the jurisdiction of the League and that the colored races of the world having a preponderance of votes in the League may be able to determine this question in a way which will upset the settled policy of the United States in this matter?"

PRACTICAL SIDE NOT IGNORED.

Because the President appeals for the treaty, and particularly the League of Nations covenant, to have been idealistic in character, it is a great mistake to imagine that the President has ignored the practicalities of the situation, at least so far as ratification is concerned.

He is not relying chiefly upon Utopian sentiment to bring about ratification. Apparently he has achieved what has heretofore been regarded as the impossible—he has convinced both capital and labor that the interests of each only can be fully subserved by carrying out of the world police.

There is no doubt, whatever, that he expects both of these classes to exert great pressure upon the Senate for the ratification of the treaty. In private conversations, Senators who are supporting the treaty and also Senators who are party to the fight against it, admit this. Opponents of the treaty have not seen fit to talk about this fact in the Senate, but they are talking very much about it and very strongly about it in private, and are declaring it to be one of the most disturbing phases of the situation.

APPEAL MADE TO LABOR.

In his message, addressed to his countrymen, President Wilson dwelt upon the fact that the treaty furnishes guarantees such as were never given or even contemplated before for the fair treatment of all who labor at the daily tasks of the world, and he said that it was for this reason that he had spoken of it as a "great charter for a new order of affairs."

The President has made frequent references to the benefits which he asserts will come to labor from the operation of the covenant. The overwhelming vote by which the American Federation of Labor indorsed the covenant shows that these appeals have been effective. He has not said anything about the benefits to capital, and not much has been said about that anywhere—not even in the debate—publicly, but the Senators are by no means ignorant of the benefits which capital expects to derive.

GREAT BANKERS INTERESTED.

Some of the great bankers of New York have publicly stated that, in addition to the great gains which the United States government and banking interests have already advanced to Europe, many billions more must be advanced if Europe is to be put securely on her industrial feet. This additional help, it is said, must be given to Europe in order to secure the investments already made in the investments already made can be made secure and additional investments of billions guaranteed. there will be a golden harvest for the financiers of the United States. They see the opportunities for this harvest and they are anxious to garner it.

The possibilities stagger the imagination, when stated in terms of dollars. For instance, Professor Joseph M. Goldstein says that Russia alone needs $58,450,000,000 for railroad construction, industries and public utilities in the next ten years. There are also great opportunities for investment in Germany, in Austria, in Serbia, in Rumania, in France, in Italy and in the new nations of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

VAST SUMS INVOLVED.

Already the leading bankers in the United States have started to organize the financial interests of the country to furnish these vast sums of money which Europe needs for its rehabilitation. If, however, these great sums needed in Europe are to be furnished by the United States, the financiers demand that their investments be made secure. And here is where the League of Nations comes in.

There is no doubt, whatever, that he expects both of these classes to exert great pressure upon the Senate for the ratification of the treaty. In private conversations, Senators who are supporting the treaty and also Senators who are party to the fight

The motion was unanimously adopted and the following board members were appointed to act: M. J. O'Donnell, chairman; Richard W. Garrity, Thomas H. Geraughty, P. Harry Jennings, William S. O'Connor, William Kohn, Fred J. Dempsey, Miss Anna Bowen, Peter Mullen and Abe Fearlstein.

"Battle for Liberty and Honor Lost." Say Old German Junkers

By International News Service.

Berlin, June 29, via London, June 30.—The peace treaty signed on Saturday at Versailles was attacked in a proclamation issued by the German National People's party here today.

"The battle for German liberty and honor is lost," said the proclamation. "We want this disgrace to remain unforgotten through generation after generation. The peace can create only hatred. The terms are unfulfillable."

The proclamation concluded with the expression that it could never be a "living, true peace."

(The German National People's party is made up of Prussian conservatives and represents the old junker or war clique.)

Allies Advise Turk Peace Delegation to Depart From Paris

By International News Service.

Paris, June 30.—Declaring that nothing can be gained by their presence here under present conditions, the Turkish peace envoys today were counselled to leave Paris by the allies. The following note was handed to the Turkish plenipotentiaries:

"The principal allied and associated powers desire to thank the Turkish delegation for the statements which they requested permission to lay before the peace conference. These statements have received and will continue to receive the careful consideration which they deserve. But they touch on other interests besides those of Turkey and they raise international questions whose immediate decision is unfortunately impossible.

"Though, therefore the council are most anxious to proceed rapidly with the final settlement of peace, and fully realize the inconvenience of prolonging the present period of uncertainty, an exhaustive survey of the situation has convinced them that some delay is inevitable.

"They feel, that, in these circumstances, nothing would be gained by a longer stay in Paris at the present time of the Turkish delegation, which the Turkish government requested leave to depart and to proceed to France. Though, when the period arrives at which further interchange of ideas seems likely to be profitable, the (the allies and associated powers) will fail to communicate with the Turkish government as to the best method by which this result may be conveniently and rapidly accomplished."

This will be done by the bank during July, when the verification of pass books will also take place.

FINLAND DOCKS WITH 3,655 MEN FROM FRANCE

Yankee Division Represented on Transport; Big Welcome in Harbor

The United States army transport Finland, with 154 officers and 3,501 men, arrived from Brest at the Tide Water Docks at 7 o'clock this morning. She brought the Third Cavalry, three battalions and the headquarters company of the 78th Field Artillery, and a number of smaller detachments and casuals, some of the latter being members of the Yankee Division who have been in hospitals or on special duty in France.

Among the casual detachments were twenty-five college professors and teachers who have been in charge of schools abroad under the Army Educational Corps.

The ship docked amid much blowing of horns and whistles, and the interest of the men on the ship was immediately arrested by the performance of Miss Pauline Felger of Braintree who did a dancing act on the wharf to music by the navy yard band.

The Y. D. men on the Finland were Joseph Jason, 101st Engineers, New Bedford; Frank Rogers, 101st Infantry, East Boston; Fred T. Taylor, 102d Infantry, New Bedford; John Alvin, 104th Engineers, Boston; John Gatvin, 101st Infantry, Charlestown; Anton Wiugren, 104th Infantry, South Boston; Frank Godbout, 101st Field Artillery, Cambridge; Dominick Draffone, 101st Infantry, Boston; Stephen Cuneo, 101st Infantry, Everett; Fred T. Sweeney, 104th Infantry, Cambridge.

De Valera Pays Tribute to Hearst News Organization

Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Republic, paid a tribute to the Hearst news-gathering organization yesterday in his speech at Fenway Park, when he told of an interview he gave to an American newspaperman in Dublin while the British secret service were seeking unsuccessfully to arrest him.

This interview was given on the day President Wilson arrived in Boston and spoke at Mechanics Hall. In the course of his speech, President Wilson said that "America was the hope of the world."

President De Valera said yesterday that on that same day at almost the same hour he was telling an American newspaperman that "America was the hope of the world."

The American newspaperman to whom President De Valera gave this interview was a reporter from the Universal Service, a Hearst news-gathering organization.

That interview was published exclusively in Boston in the Boston American of that date.

Yesterday President De Valera said:

"By a curious coincidence on the very day and practically at the same hour that your President was using the words, 'America is the hope of the world,' in your hall here in Boston, I was using the same words to an American reporter who had sought me out in Dublin to interview me, when the English detectives could not find me."

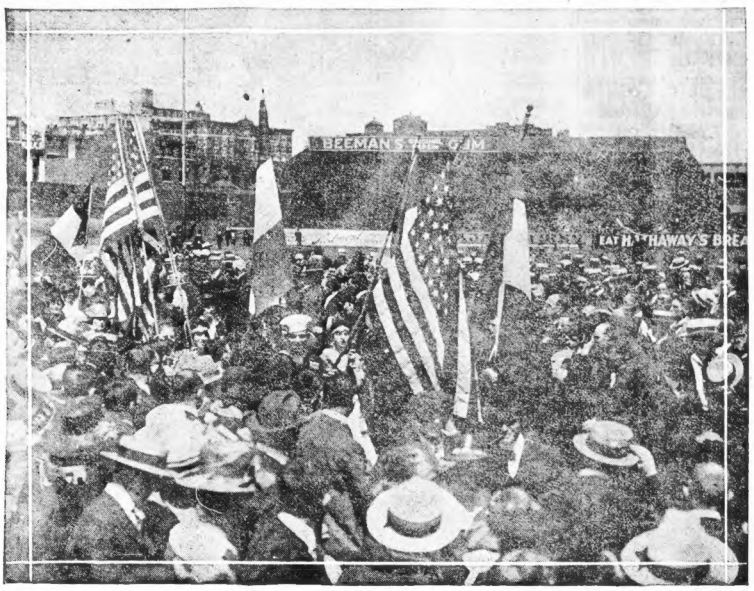
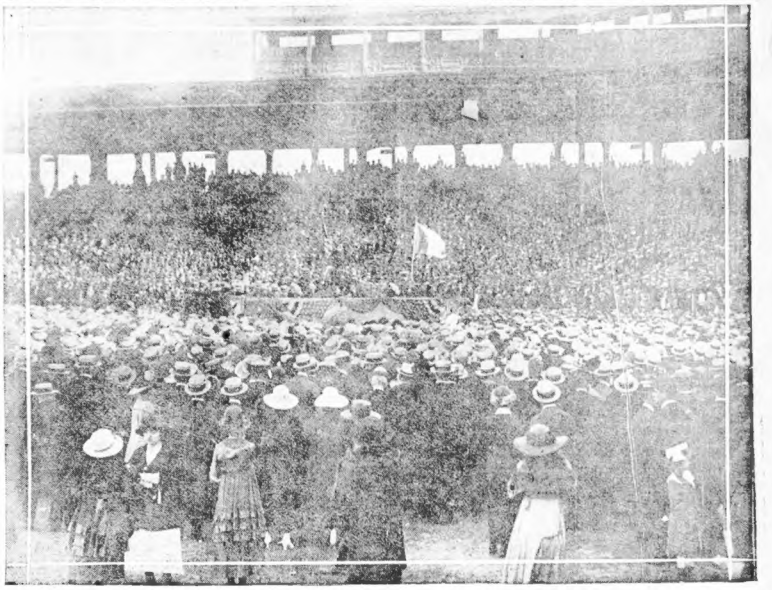
SCENES DURING PRESIDENT DE VALERA'S HISTORIC VISIT TO BOSTON, BRINGING MESSAGE FROM ERIN





65,000 AT FENWAY PARK TO WELCOME DE VALERA

Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Republic by the grace of the votes of the people and the inability of the British government to lay hands on him, was accorded a welcome at Fenway Park such as has not been seen in this generation given to any stranger within the gates of this city.

The arrival of the Irish chief and his reception and address at the Copley-Plaza Hotel had given the leaders among Irish-Americans a chance to meet him, but his appearance in the big ball field was the first opportunity for the mass of the people to pay him tribute, and they did it, to the number of 65,000.

An audience characteristically Irish in enthusiasm and American in almost every sense jammed the available spaces of the big park near the speakers' platform. There were thousands perhaps, who did not hear the speeches but they "listened" through the speaking program that lasted from 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon until 6. They never for a moment lost the infectious, high spirited enthusiasm.

WOMEN FAINT.

The welcome accorded De Valera, acclaimed as the savior of the Emerald Isle, brought tears to the eyes of the Irish chief. He was visibly moved but kept his poise and recovered spontaneously from the remarkable reception which he received.

"Up De Valera," "God Save the Irish Republic," "God Save Old Ireland," were cries heard on every hand. To the accompaniment of these and similar cries the human mass of cheering, high-frantic people surged forward. It looked as if the stand on which the Irish President stood, his tall form dressed in black and silhouetted against a June blue sky, would be swept from under his very feet. The surging throng sweeping closer to him almost crushed one another. At least a score of women fainted or were overcome. A dozen women at least had to be lifted on to the platform, where they were revived.

The human overpouring caused the cordons of foot and mounted police to use every effort to relieve the strain. In the aisles and between the long rows of seats the eager throng crowded. Boston bestowed a big Irish heart on De Valera and, as the Irish chief said after the meeting, he will leave a big piece of his own heart here when he departs.

IRISH FLAGS WAVE.

The "cead mile failte"—hundred thousand welcomes—were extended to De Valera in a hundred ways. With the entrance of the chief, who passed through a lane of people opened up by the mounted police, cheering began. Thousands of flags of the Sinn Fein tri-color of green, white and orange, waved frantically in the hands of men, women and children.

Mayor Quinn of Cambridge called for three cheers for the President of the Irish Republic as Dr. De Valera appeared, and three cheers were given three times over and then some more. Rev. Father Phillip O'Donnell, pastor of St. James' Church, opened the great meeting with an address. "Thanks be to God for this day which is so near to the day of justice for Ireland," said the priest. Father O'Donnell also brought to the meeting the felicitations of Cardinal O'Connell who, but for his presence in Chicago, would have been present.

Daniel H. Hickey, representing the bench and bar committee of the Irish Victory Fund which arranged the demonstration, introduced Thomas H. Mahoney as permanent chairman of the meeting. Mr. Mahoney said that in the same sense as great one of a former day had pleaded for the cause of Ireland so did Professor De Valera appear in Boston.

GOVERNOR SENT REGRETS.

Governor Coolidge, who was ill and "out of town, sent a letter through T. A. Fitzgerald regretting his absence. In his letter the Governor referred to the Irish President as the "Honorable Eamon De Valera." Neither the Governor or Mayor Peters referred to Professor De Valera as the President of the Irish Republic. The Governor wrote that he believed it is the duty of America to help those countries which helped her in her hour of need.

While Mayor Peters was addressing the throng and several other times during the great mass meeting former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell found it necessary to urge the crowd to press back. His words were accepted good-naturedly but little heeded and with every succeeding burst of applause the throng surged forward, almost imperilling those on the speakers' rostrum. Enthusiasm knew as the meeting progressed. Of course the big demonstration was made when De Valera himself spoke, but next to him the one who received the greatest ovation was that given to Harry J. Boland, the secretary who worked his way to this country as a stoker.

PASS RESOLUTIONS.

All the speakers were greeted with enthusiasm. They were Senator David I. Walsh, Mayor Peters, Mayor Quinn, Joseph F. O'Connell, Congressman Eugene F. Kincaid of New Jersey, John H. H. McNamee and Thomas H. Mahoney.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the meeting:

Resolved: That we return thanks to the United States Senate for their American patriotic and sympathetic action in instructing the American delegates at Paris to bring the case of Ireland, through its representatives, to the Peace Conference, that her case may be heard.

Resolved: That we declare ourselves unreservedly in favor of the independence of Ireland and demand that our government recognize the Irish Republic.

Resolved: That we register our opposition to any proposed League of Nations which does not protect all American rights and ideals and which binds us to guarantee the territorial integrity of the British and Japanese Empires.

America Alone Can Save Fruits of the War for Democracy, Says Valera

Preceding his address with a few words spoken in the Gaelic language, De Valera said:

"Gaels and Friends of the Gael: I speak to you in the tongue of the Gael, that tongue carried in Irish the greeting I bring from the 'white hills of Ireland.' I regret that my voice does not carry to the limits of this meeting because I would like every one here to hear that greeting which I know would touch a responsive chord in every one of your hearts.

"They told us during the war that we had lost the sympathy of America (cries of liars). Like yourselves, I never mince words and told them, as you, that that was a lie. I knew that the people of your land showed the way to the peoples of the world to true liberty. I knew that the land in which I had the honor to be born was not going to misunderstand the struggles of a people fighting against tyranny far greater than had been charged against Germany.

"When an opportunity came, I came to you, as I came to the people of Clare after my liberation from prison. England had branded us as criminals. England said that even our own people despised us as traitors to Ireland.

DECRIES POLITICS.

"I answered that I for one was willing to be judged by the Irish people and that if they called us traitors I would accept their judgment and hang my head in shame. You know what the verdict of Clare was and I think I shall carry back the same verdict from America.

"Yes! I do not for a moment believe that America will make a shuttle cock of our cause, to pass it from party to party. (Cries of 'We will make a shuttle cock of the Democratic party.')

"Americans may differ in their home politics but they are united in the cause of liberty. I come to your grand free land not by any means to make the Irish question a party question in your politics here. It will not become a party question, or, if it does, only in the sense that both parties will vie with each other to see which can best help Ireland to her liberty.

"I shall not attempt to plead Ireland's case now. It was sweet to my ears to hear the cause of Ireland pleaded thus by Americans. When I go through this country I hope I shall continue to hear the cause of Ireland pleaded everywhere by Americans and that I shall only be called upon to represent Ireland by my physical presence.

"I am going to read this statement to you, because of the danger of being misquoted. This danger is made clear to me by the quotation of one of our speakers taken from the press and widely circulated that after I had been arrested I said:

"'Shoot me if you will, but spare my men.'

"I never made such a statement. I would not have insulted my men by asking England to spare them. I said, 'Arrange for my men.' I was negotiating the surrender at the time.

HISTORY REPEATING.

"Advocating the cause that I advocate here in Boston in the very cradle of liberty, it requires somewhat of an effort on my part to refrain from making a parallel with those events so closely associated with your city and so nearly parallel to present events in Ireland and the cause for which I am here seeking your support.

"I do refrain, however, not only because I believe that those parallels are already visibly before your minds and in your consciousness, but because I believe that no appeal to your feelings or your sympathies could make your hearts more with us than they are.

"Instead of carrying you back a period of 150 years, I shall then direct your attention to the immediate present moment and its possibilities, a moment which, if the American people will it, can be made as great a land mark in the history of progress and civilization as were the events of 1776.

USED WILSON'S WORDS.

"By a curious coincidence on the very day and practically at the same hour that your President was using the words, 'America is the hope of the world,' in your hall here in Boston, I was using the same words to an American reporter who had sought me out in Dublin to interview me, when the English detectives could not find me.

"I gave reasons, too, for my opinion. I pointed out that considering all the circumstances, America alone of all the powerful nations was in a position to take that calm detached look which was absolutely essential if the world was not to be thrown back once more into the old system of secret diplomacy and intrigue of selfish alliances and balances which have never ceased to breed war and misery and which culminated in the world conflict through which we have been passing.

IN A WORLD CRISIS.

"Now the thought which I express on that occasion was the thought practically of every man and woman in Ireland and it sprang from the selfish reason that America was the hope of Ireland in particular but the famous Irish people are a spiritual people with interests second to none in humanity's future.

"I believe there is no nation in this world more keenly alive to the supreme issues for mankind involved in the Paris negotiations. We in Ireland recognize that if the wrong turning be now taken, if evidence be established in its former supremacy as the final sanction, humanity is faced with a period of misery for which history hitherto has no parallel.

"The burdens of taxation due to the debts incurred in the war, the spirit of competitive armaments, and the old diplomatic intrigues, will lead inevitably to the internal upheavals of states, that is, to anarchy and civil wars a whole series of irregular wars vastly more terrible than the more organized conflict now ended.

"Peace was nominally signed between the two great combating sides yesterday, I understand. Peace! Peace that gives us twenty new wars instead of one that it nominally ends. And this is the peace treaty the world has been asked to look forward to as the treaty that would end wars and establish a stable, lasting peace.

"Unless some miracle happens in modesty and — mockery it will remain unless America takes up the responsibility and the moral leadership of the world to which her consistent traditions no less than the aims she set herself in entering this war entitles her. That leadership at this moment is freely offered to her by the common sense and common enjoyment of mankind.

IS LAST OPPORTUNITY.

"The present opportunity is never likely to occur again. The idea of a community of nations operating law and a common right ending war amongst nations as municipal law and the settled private wars amongst individuals is today a possibility if America does what the people of the world—the honest, the plain people your President spoke of—pray and assume America will do. To lose this moment would be a disaster that it will be impossible to repair.

"The people have been carried on during the war, the doctrines of right and liberty and justice that were enunciated, even though the motives of some of the spokesmen may have been hypocritical cause still were their work. The world is prepared and is ready. The minds and hearts of men made ready for peace by the circumstances of sadness and misery surrounding the toughing years deeply impressed by the truths they were being taught.

DEMOCRACY DIES.

"The seed fell on loosened, freshened soil. Will America allow the fruit of such a propitious sowing to remain shattered and practically lost by a neglectful harvest? America alone can save it. She alone has the strength if she has, as we who look to her believe she has, the will. If America disappoints then the right-minded, the good, the just in the world will be thrown back to a sullen and cynical despair. Democracy dies or else goes mad.

"A new 'Holy Alliance' cannot save democracy—a just League of Nations founded on the only basis on which it can be just—the equality of right amongst nations small no less than great—can.

"America can see to it that such a League is set up and set up now. She is strong enough to do so and it is her right consequent on the explicit terms on which she entered the war. She will be backed up by the right minded of the whole world, by all but some scheming diplomats or the financial interests that back them. Let her lead—true democracy will organize itself the world over to press on to salvation and happiness behind her.

ADOPTED WILSON'S IDEALS.

"We in Ireland watched with keen interest every development. Our must build. The material and the strategic object since we came out of antiquity are in abundance."

Irish Crowds Burn British Flags in Dundalk Riot

London, June 30.—A soldiers' peace celebration at Dundalk, Ireland, broke up in a riot when crowds rushed the celebrating English troops and seized and burned a number of British flags. Cheers were given for President De Valera. Troops finally cleared the streets, using bayonets.

prison has been to put Ireland in the proud position she now occupies, a definite claimant for her full rights ready to enter the world family of nations. I will read for you an extract from our Parliamentary debate on the League of Nations. It is a motion that was carried unanimously and ordered to be sent to your President.

"That the elected Parliament and government of the Irish Republic pledge the entire support of the Irish nation in translating into deeds the principles enunciated by the President of the United States at Washington's tomb on July 4, 1918, and whole-heartedly accepted by the people of America during the war.

"We are eager and ready to enter a world League of Nations based on an equality of right in which the guarantees exchanged neither recognize nor imply a difference between big nations and small, between those that are powerful and those that are weak. We are willing to accept all the duties, responsibilities and burdens which inclusion in such a League implies.'

"Ireland offers herself unreservedly in that cause. Let America and America's President take the forward steps that fate clearly indicates for them — emancipate and save the world. A League of Nations can be framed in Washington as well as in Paris. Now is the time to frame it — it is not enough to destroy—you must build. The material and the strategic object since we came out of antiquity are in abundance."

FORMER MRS. SKEELS CONFRONTS NURSE

woman leaned heavily on crutches. She approached the witness stand.

CONFRONTED WITH CRIPPLE.

The white-faced defendant, a marvel of self-control, looked the black-gowned woman in the face. The crippled woman steadily returned the glance. A pin falling would have been heard in the courtroom.

"Do you know this woman?" asked the Attorney-General.

"I can't see from this distance," replied Mrs. Lundgren.

Please come nearer," said Mr. Attwill to the woman.

Hobbling on her crutches, the black-gowned woman moved closer to Mrs. Lundgren.

"She is Mrs. Frank Skeels, isn't she?" asked Mr. Attwill.

"She is the woman I knew as Mrs. Frank Skeels," calmly replied Mrs. Lundgren.

That's all," said Mr. Attwill, and Mrs. Lundgren's composure was the under which she collapsed was over at exactly five minutes past the noon hour.

A moment later Mrs. Lundgren's counsel, Mr. Daley, introduced a paper in his attempt to put Mrs. Lundgren right before the world. It purported to be the certified copy of a divorce secured by Nellie B. Skeels and given to the defendant by Mr. Skeels before their marriage in 1901.

WOMAN'S CONDITION BETTER.

Mrs. Lundgren began the fourth and last week of her trial in better condition than at any time since she submitted herself to this ordeal. She showed no ill effects of her weakening of last week, but on the contrary seemed to have stored up a surplus of reserve strength during her rest of three days.

Her pillows were comfortably arranged by court officers and her feet placed in a foot-rest, before Attorney-General Attwill was allowed to take the witness. He immediately opened a cross-fire of questions regarding the origin and dissemination of certain articles which the State has all along maintained the "Sunshine Nurse" pilfered from the Gay home.

These articles included the squirrel furs made by Weiner of Lawrence, Mrs. Lundgren said she bought the furrier after she received them from her mother, who had purchased them in either Cleveland or Columbus.

NURSE PAID BY CHECK.

In answer to a question Mrs. Lundgren said that she was paid in the Gay household by check, and that she received $18 a week from November 1st.

There was never any trouble about it," said Mrs. Lundgren.

Q—Do you recall Mrs. Hipsley telling you that they had found the burglars and that you said you thought you wouldn't be there much longer?—A—I don't recall it. I remember that they had found the burglars and I said I didn't know that they had been burglars.

Q—Did Miss Gay have a piano?—A—Yes.

Q—Did she play?—A—Beautifully.

Q—Did you ever play on the piano for Miss Gay?—A—Sometimes when I did not.

The witness said that Nellie Jones was her niece, that she lived in New York, but that she had not seen her for five years.

Q—Did you tell Mr. Daley that Mrs. Jones told you that Mrs. Skeels left home?—A—I did not know it until I heard her say it here.

Q—You referred to a cash book that you kept. Did you leave that with your personal effects in the Gay house?—A—I left no things there for I wasn't expecting to leave there at all, the time I left.

VISITS HAVING WANED.

Q—When you first saw Mr. Wetzel in New Jersey you told her that Bert was going to die.—A—I told her what the doctors said, that I don't think I told her that that day.

Q—Did you ever show her a check, or a sale of a diamond for $65 to be recorded?—A—Never.

Q—When you got the Hawkeye Insurance policy, which is the description blank belonging to the Hawkeye Policy, that you had in your possession?—A—I don't remember.

Q—Where did you get the blank?—A—I think Carolina Nichols, the doctor had all papers in.

Q—Did you ever tell Mr. Daley or anyone connected with the case that you got it from Miss Nichols?—A—I don't remember.

Q—Have you talked at all?—A—Now stop reading so fast, please.

Q—Weren't you out on the porch other night?—A—No, not that I remember.

Q—Only domestics except when married.

TIES EATING TALCUM.

Q—When you were in the hospital in Dr. Meagher's office did you see Mrs. Skeels was

Q—Weren't you eating talcum powder when you were there?—A—I was eating talcum.

Q—Didn't you eat talcum and didn't take it away from you?

Q—Did you live in Toledo, Ohio?—A—I was born and farm there.

Q—Didn't you live with Frank Skeels there as Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Daley?—A—I never did.

Q—Didn't you live with Mr. Skeels in 1898 as his wife?—A—I never lived with Mr. Skeels after I performed my consul that the date of my marriage to Mr. Skeels was July 27, 1901.

Q—You looked that up as the result of something your counsel told you?—A—I looked it up because I was hazy about dates.

Q—Did you ever live here with Frank Skeels as husband and wife for thirteen years before he died?—A—No, I was about seven and a half years.

Q—Wasn't Frank Skeels a widower when you married him?—A—I found that out afterwards.

Q—Didn't he get his divorce sometime in 1901?—A—But I explain? I didn't get that divorce. He got it papers.

OF MARRIAGE.

Are you a marriage certificate?—A—No, I have not.

Are you sure you were ever married to Skeels?—A—Yes, sir.

Q—Can you say where you were married to Skeels?—A—It was somewhere out in the suburbs of Miamisburg.

Q—Did you know the first Mrs. Skeels?—A—I don't know that she was ever married to him.

Q—Didn't you use to talk like to your house and tell her Mrs. Skeels?—A—I used to until my people heard things.

Q—Mr. Skeels left Paterson in 1898, didn't he?—A—I'm not sure.

Q—Didn't you tell Mrs. Paterson in 1898 with Mr. Skeels?—A—I did not, sir.

Q—Didn't you use the name Mrs. Frank Skeels in connection with your name?—A—I did not know it until I heard her say it here.

Q—You referred to a cash book that you kept. Did you leave that with your personal effects in the Gay house?—A—I left no things there for I wasn't expecting to leave there at all, the time I left.

the request of her counsel that she went over her papers, which she kept in a miniature trunk in the top of the bookcase.

Q—As a consequence of this search did you find this paper?—A—I can't see very well, but I recognize the paper.

The paper, the witness said, was one given to her by Mr. Skeels in 1901, previous to her marriage. The paper was a certified copy of a divorce in 1901 secured by Nellie B. Skeels of Fairfield County, Ohio, from Frank M. Skeels of Youngstown Ohio. The paper certified that the marriage of Nellie B. Merritt and Frank M. Skeels occurred on November 24, 1886, and that on April 28, 1896, he deserted her.

Q—It was after the divorce record was handed you by Frank M. Skeels, you who married the following July?—A—It was.

Attorney-General Attwill:

Q—When was it you gave that divorce to your counsel?—A—Last Saturday night. I could not find them before then.

Mr. Daley asked Mrs. Lundgren if she was ill on Friday last and if she was unconscious. Attorney-General Attwill objected and the Court asked the purpose of the question. "Because my brother claims that the defendant is faking," returned Mr. Daley.

"I have heard no such claim," said the Court. "Until I do, I shall excuse it."

Mrs. Lundgren could not recall the name of the clergyman who married her. It was either MacGregor or MacGregor. I don't know which," she said. "I always remembered it began with Mac."

NEVER MET BUFFALO BILL.

Mr. Daley asked her if she was ever married to Buffalo Bill.

"My brother has mentioned W. F. Cody. Did you ever know him?" he asked.

"I never met him, Mr. Daley," was the reply.

Richard P. Whitton, an Andover carpenter, said he worked in the Gay house and erected a table for Miss Gay, August 13, 1917.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Wright of Andover, the next witness, said she did papered one of the rooms. She said she worked at the Gay house, but never saw Florence Gay.

Q—Did you ever see anything about the sheets?—A—I know there was something to make the students' beds, and Mrs. Skeels said she'd go over to her house and get some. She came back with an armful of them.

Michael J. Scannell, engineer for sixteen years at Abbott Academy, said that he examined the plumbing in the Gay house the November before Miss Gay died.

Q—What were you there for.—A—To measure for a new boiler for the kitchen.

Q—Where was the tank located?—A—In Miss Gay's bedroom closet.

Q—Were the plumbers working there under your direction?—A—Until the day before Miss Gay died.

Q—Did you remember offering Miss Gay any assistance?—A—I remember Mrs. Skeels asking me if I had seen Miss Gay fall. I said I hadn't and asked her if I could assist her. She said no, she had got to her bed.

Julia Nichols, the little Syrian girl to whom the defendant was always the "sunshine nurse," said she had seen Mrs. Skeels at a neighbors house.

Q—What did she do for you?—A—She did everything for us, made us clothes and everything.

Q—When there was a parade in Andover, what did you do.—A—Went out of the line and kissed Mrs. Skeels.

KISSES DEFENDANT.

As the little girl left the stand she stopped at the side of Mrs. Lundgren's chair kissing her impulsively, the kiss ringing through the room.

Dr. Robert L. Emerson, one of the strongest and a final expert for the defense, qualified as an expert consulting chemist. He is a graduate of Harvard, travelled two years abroad, graduated from Harvard Medical in 1905, spent a year and a half in studying chemistry in Strassburg and Berlin, was for three years assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry in Washington, and during the war was subsistence chief expert of the War Department.

Q—What has been your experience in regard to the finding of arsenic in the human body?—A—In a number of years I have never failed to find traces of it.

Q—How does it get there?—A—In food, drink, clothes and exposure to wall papers.

Q—In what other way have you found arsenic?—A—In mattresses in appreciable quantities.

The witness described the manner analysis is made.

Objection to this line of testimony was made by the Attorney General and the Court inquired as to the purpose of this line of inquiry.

"To outraged," Dr. Whitney," answered Mr. Daley, and the witness was allowed to continue.

HEARD NURSE CRY OUT.

Charles F. Emerson of Andover, the man at whose house Mrs. Lundgren made her home at the time of her arrest, under questioning similar by Attorney-General Attwill, said that he had talked over the matter of the grocer and the arrest of Mrs. Skeels very little with her attorney, Daniel J. Daley. He said that he had moved a load of furniture from Rye, N. H. for Miss Gay, and that he had slept in the Gay house on occasions and he had been asked to do so by Mrs. Skeels.

Q—Did you hear anything?—A—I heard Mrs. Skeels cry out, and jumped out of bed and ran downstairs. Mrs. Skeels said there was somebody in the next room.

Q—Did you see anyone there?—A—No. I saw a lot of papers scattered around the floor and on the table.

Witness said he didn't think there were any burglars when he went there. He denied that he had told the Grand Jury that the gas cock in the bathroom did not turn very hard, and repeated his testimony of Saturday that there had never been a gas meter attached to that gas cock since it had been placed in the bathroom.

He said he had taken a trunk to the station for Mrs. Skeels when she was going away but could recall nothing about it except it was a steamer trunk.

SMELLED BRANDY, NOT GAS.

Dr. Percy J. Looke, practicing physician of Andover, followed Mr. Emerson on the stand. He said he was called to the Emerson house the morning of the arrest, in 1918

Q—Did you smell any gas?—A—I did not.

Q—Was there any evidence of gas asphyxiation about Mrs. Skeels?—A—There was not.

Cross-examined, the witness said that Mrs. Skeels was very pale, her eyes closed, breathing quietly, and with rapid pulse.

Q—What did her breath smell of?—A—Brandy.

Q—You said you found a bottle in her room, what did it smell of?—A—It was a half pint bottle and smelled of brandy.

Q—Did she talk?—A—She only mumbled a few words—something about "don't leave me," and then she mumbled a name that I didn't get.

Q—Did she vomit while you were there?—A—Three times.

Q—That could be considered a symptom of gas poisoning, couldn't it?—A—It would be consistent with it.

Q—What did the increase in pulse indicate?—A—It would not be inconsistent with gas poisoning.

Q—Did you think she was unconscious?—A—I didn't know.

Q—Did you think she could speak, or wouldn't?—A—I didn't know.

George A. Higgins, town clerk of Andover, presented the death return of Florence W. Gay made by Dr. Abbott. It was marked for exhibit. It was received by him on Dec. 15, 1917.

PILOT OF DEATH PLANE HEARD AT INQUEST

Dorchester Judge Takes Under Advisement Fatalities at Franklin Field

Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Clagett, air service and several other army officers testified today at an inquest into the disaster early last week in which two children killed last week by Colonel Clagett's plane, the "Black Jack," when it alighted at Franklin Field, following a flight from Dallas, Tex.

The children were Joseph Benaglia, twelve, of No. 60 Canterbury street, and Beatrice Rosenblatt, twelve, of No. 58 Canterbury street. The machine piloted by Colonel Clagett, was run into a tree to avoid other children when the crowd surged onto the field.

The case for the Boston police was presented by Inspector James A. Brennan, while Colonel O. B. Myers put in the army's side. Judge Merritt made the matter under advisement, after summing up the case for the army.

Colonel Myers said that Franklin Field, being a playground, is a bad place for landing and that it is also only a two-way field, being long and narrow. Colonel Clagett, he said, risked his own life in landing as he did, but followed army regulations which are to land a plane into an obstruction rather than into a crowd, and for the aviator to risk his own life rather than that of any spectator.

In the course of the inquest it was announced that James B. Shea, head of the Park and Recreation Department, has issued orders that no more permits be given for airplanes to land at the field. Motorcycle Officer M. J. Fitzgibbons of the Dorchester police station was complimented by the aviators for his coolness and courage at the time of the accident.

WILKINS HANGS HIMSELF IN JAIL

Physician Convicted as Wife Slayer Carries Out Plan to Be His 'Own Executioner'

Mineola, N. Y., June 30.—Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins, just convicted of wife murder and awaiting the death sentence, which was to have been pronounced on Tuesday, committed suicide in jail here by hanging.

The aged physician who was convicted by the jury Friday afternoon, after the jurors had deliberated for twenty-two hours, obtained a rope in some manner and probably concealed it beneath his clothing before asking his guards to escort him to the bathroom. There, while the backs of Guards John Mills and William Henderson were turned, he fashioned a crude noose, threw it about his neck, fastened the end of the rope to a pipe, kicked away the pail upon which he stood and was swinging when the guards discovered him. The noise made by the pail attracted their attention.

Mills and Henderson immediately cut down the swaying body and found the pulse still beating. They applied first aid and called for help. Other guards came hurriedly and Dr. Guy Cleghorn, the jail physician, was on the scene within a few minutes. He directed that other physicians be summoned from Nassau Hospital, but a short distance away, and requested to fetch a pulmotor.

It was 7:45 o'clock when Dr. Wilkins kicked the pail from under him. Less than ten minutes later the pulmotor was being used but with little appreciable effect.

A bulletin issued by the doctors as they worked over him, at 8 o'clock, said there was little hope. He died a few minutes afterward.

Throughout the afternoon the aged murderer busily wrote letters. It was only after he had committed to paper his last messages that he expressed a wish to go to the bathroom.

Every possible precaution was believed to have been taken to prevent the very thing which took place. Dr. Wilkins was too old and infirm for any apprehension to be entertained that he might try to escape, but that he might attempt to take his own life whether or not his conviction, as he claimed, was unjust was common belief. It was thought that, if guilty, as the jury had pronounced him, he would seek to cheat the electric chair and that, if innocent, as he vehemently asseverated, he would probably seek to end the unendurable humiliation by the shortest possible means.

NECK BROKEN BY FALL.

Dr. Wilkins' neck was broken by the fall of his heavy body.

Dr. Wilkins maintained his claim of innocence in at least one of the four letters written by him during the afternoon. Coroner Jones gave out brief quotations from one of the letters.

After reiterating his claim that he did not murder his wife the convicted man wrote:

"Mather thus he driven across the State of New York by Carmen Pinat, county detective, and delivered up to Sing Sing prison, I prefer to be my own executioner. Besides, if will save Justice Manning from looking into my face when he tells me I have had a fair trial."

One of the letters was addressed to Sheriff Phineas Seaman. The sheriff was expected to see that the body be cremated.

"There's $60 in my clothes which you can use for this purpose," the writer added.

PINNED UNDER AUTO, BUT ESCAPE INJURY

Unable to extricate the occupants of an automobile which had turned turtle after a collision with his own machine, M. H. Adams of No. 220 Adams street, Dedham, was forced early today to go for assistance to help him move the overturned car. Beneath it, uninjured save for minor cuts and a shaking up, the rescuers found Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bion of No. 23 Hillcrest street, West Roxbury. The accident occurred near the Common in Dedham. Mr. and Mrs. Bion were able to go to their home after they had been attended by a physician at a house nearby.

GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE ON THE EVE OF DROUTH

In view of the impending drouth and the possibility that prohibition will reform him, the case of Patrick F. Hughes of Dedham, in Dedham District Court today on a charge of drunkenness for the fourth time within a year, was placed on file by Judge Emery Grover. "I trust that you will take advantage of this opportunity to turn over a new leaf," said the court. "Since you will not be able to obtain drink legally after today, I think you should have one more chance."

MOTORMAN SAVES GIRL'S LIFE WITH SNOW GUARD

The presence of mind of the motorman of an Elevated-Davis square car in lowering the snow guard prevented 8-year-old Marjorie Hall, daughter of George A. Hall of 14 Chester avenue, Somerville, from losing her life when she was struck by the car on Cross street, opposite Alston street, Somerville. The little girl was taken to the Somerville Hospital in an unconscious condition, where several stitches were taken in a cut on her forehead.

The little girl ran directly in front of the car, the fender knocking her down and pinning her underneath.

Found Dead in Bed

Slight Newly-Weds at Harvard Summer School

Honeymooners if they expect to spend their coming hours in Harvard halls, in addition to pursuing their studies in the Summer school, are doomed to disappointment this year. The school for several Summers has been a mecca for newlyweds, as the Summer school authorities offered all the comforts of home to those who wished to take the six weeks' instruction at Cambridge.

But this year no special arrangement has been made in dire or Standish halls for married folks. The custom of the past few years in reserving a wing for them in one of these halls has been given up. The women of the school will be quartered in Gore Hall and eat there, while the men will room in Standish Hall and take their meals at Smith Hall. The authorities have provided a chaperon at Gore.

LILLIAN RUSSELL SEEKS LOST DAUGHTER

Advertises for Word of Miss Dorothy, Who Is Mysteriously Missing from Pittsburgh

New York, June 30.—"Information wanted concerning the whereabouts of Miss Dorothy Russell, daughter of Lillian Russell—M. K."

This advertisement appearing in the personal column of a New York paper was the cause of much speculation among friends of Miss Russell and her mother, who is now the wife of Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh.

Interest in the mysterious advertisement was intensified by the fact that it was followed by announcement from Lillian Russell that her daughter was with her in Pittsburgh and was employed on her stepfather's newspaper in that city.

Dorothy Russell has frequently figured in the newspapers. Until a few years ago she was in vaudeville, but of late has not been seen on the stage.

JACK JOHNSON IN MEXICO GETS BY COLOR LINE

Jack Johnson, the ex-heavyweight pugilist, is in again.

This time he broke into the limelight in Mexico City. Since his departure from entertaining the grandees and bull fighters of Spain, the big colored pugilist has been spending his time in Mexico City.

Boosting along in his high-powered automobile with his white "wife beater" Jack Johnson has become one of the sights of Mexico's capital. Dressing of his being "picked" are numerous and with the amount of money Johnson throws daily in the gilded cafes of the southern capital.

The other day Johnson whizzed up to Sanborn's drug store, on Madero street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, and stopped into the Mexican drug store. Some fountain presided over by Walter Sanborn, formerly of Los Angeles, and who seemed to be classed as among Johnson's admirers.

Johnson ordered a chocolate sundae. Obviously refused to serve him on the ground that the trade of colored patrons was not desired. Johnson put up a strong argument on race equality, but to no purpose.

Scrambling into his car, he whizzed away and told the store clerks through the note end of the argument.

That was their opinion, though, for Johnson whizzed back again to the drug store cutting, this time accompanied by several Mexicans in uniform.

The party entered Sanborn's again and Johnson insisted on being served. The clerk was about to refuse again when Johnson's companion introduced themselves.

Then, once they said Mexican generals and they insisted on their friend being served and insisted on Sanborn's serving them, according to what the story has it.

In a Mexican general in Mexico City, in a Mexican general, even if he hasn't the price of a tamale, and as the Sanborn brothers wished to continue business without conflict with the authorities, the drug store management finally consented to serve Johnson and his force of the city and stopped into the Mexican friends.

11,000 LEPERS SEGREGATED IN PHILIPPINES

W. M. Danner, American secretary for the Mission to Lepers, announces that James B. Woodin, director of publicity for the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., has been made a member of the American committee as a part of the committee's program in extending its world-wide influence.

The committee estimates that there are not less than 2,000,000 lepers in the world, of whom 6,000 have already been baptized as Christians. The committee aims to preach the gospel to the lepers, to relieve their dreadful sufferings and in time to rid the world of leprosy.

Dr. McKean reports that in the Philippines during the past eleven years 11,000 lepers have been segregated, and the former increase of 1,200 new cases a year has been reduced in the Philippines to almost nothing. The conviction is, therefore, that the segregation of the leper is the only sure method known for eradicating this, as yet, incurable disease.

STATE TO SPEND $5,000,000 ON ROADS THIS YEAR

In fact, nothing matters in your choice of a Sports Hat—except that you make your selection here. A selection from the marvelously extensive display in our Sports Hats Salon insures a fashionably smart creation.

Wee Bands of folded Poplin, in a complete range of delicate shades, have been fashioned into hats that will crush up into a small space in the pocket of your motor coat, or in your suit case.

Hats of lovely satin and taffeta ribbons are classed among the sports hats, but they are quite nice and exquisite enough for any occasion from the morning wedding to the fashionable evening garden fete.

Corded Taffeta is stunning in the becoming large shapes which answer the purpose of a sun hat with most bewitching effect.

Panne Velvet in pastel shades has a sheen that makes the hat most attractive. For wear with the dainty voile frocks this model is ideal.

Smartness is emphasized in every line of the trim Hatter's Plush with the Milan brim.

Duck Crushers, ornamented with felt medallions, will fit into many of the summer-time outings with propriety and comfort.

In the felt Sweater shades there are Hinoki, and chain braid straws in the large floppy hats that young girls love so much.

Imported Milans come in a variety of stunning shapes with half and full cushion brims.

There are hand woven hats and hats that are hand embroidered; there are hats with the top brim of silk and the underbrim of straw, and vice-versa; there are uncommonly large hats that defy the services of a parasol, and natty little styles that will stick to your head regardless of the wind or of the fastest motor.

The selection of hats between 3.45 and 15.00 is unusually large and interesting.

FREE IRELAND WILL RISE TO POWER, SAYS CREEL

The Irish Question

By GEORGE CREEL,

Former Chief of the United States Bureau of Public Information.

PART VII.—Continued.

Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

This is a "practical world," and never so "practical" as when some elementary proposition of equity is up for consideration and decision. Justice is rarely denied out of any lack of love for justice, but rather by reason of the fear that poor "impractical" justice will not be able to look after herself in a "practical" manner.

So, then, on many sides, we hear the question, "Can Ireland stand alone?" is the island large enough, are there enough people, what sort of its resources, finances and general ability to make good as a self-governing nation? "Practical" folk are worried about these things. Kind and bred to logic, "practical" is concerned by little.

As to size, Ireland qualifies easily for the island is twice as large as Belgium, Holland, Denmark or Switzerland, and four times as large as unless almost equal to that of Serbia, Portugal, Greece or Bulgaria. As to population, Ireland has twice as many people as Norway or Denmark, a million and more people than Switzerland, and about the same number of inhabitants as Serbia, Bulgaria or Greece.

IRELAND'S INDUSTRIES.

The industries of Ireland have been crushed, and its resources are far from full development, yet notwithstanding these handicaps, the following figures, showing trade in 1915, prove rather conclusively that the island is a going concern in itself and by itself:

Greece	$67,500,000
Bulgaria	75,000,000
Portugal	150,000,000
Rumania	205,000,000
Norway	210,000,000
Denmark	225,000,000
Sweden	375,000,000
Ireland	862,000,000

In the matter of finances, Ireland is paying to-day an annual tax revenue of $200,000,000, and as only $65,000,000 is spent on Irish government, the net profit to England is about $135,000,000 a year. The cost of government to the people of Switzerland is about $35,000,000 a year; in Norway it is $16,000,000, and in Denmark $27,500,000, and it is to be borne in mind that each of these three countries maintains an army.

The Irish insist that economy and honesty would cut their government cost to the Swiss, Danish and Norse figures, but even if this claim be put aside the surplus of $135,000,000 that goes to the English government would seem to remove any fear that an independent Ireland would have to adopt mendicancy as its profession.

These answers, concerned with population, trade and financial strength, are given by the Irish of today, are the Irish that persists after seven centuries of oppression and persecution. There is another Ireland, however, that beckons to us from history—rich in its culture, blessed in its resources, resistless in its energies and initiative—needing only to be released from bondage to rise again to strength and power.

SHRINKING POPULATION.

In 1841, the population of Ireland was 8,175,124; in 1914, the last census, it had shrunk to 4,375,554. Despite natural increase, a nation drained of half its people in seventy-three years' if the Irish case against England rested on this one count, the verdict is assured.

The story of this tragic shrinkage—wars of extermination in which women and children were not spared, famine, pestilence, evictions, amazing crimes—has been told in previous chapters; what has not been set down is the speed of rapacity, the grim chronicle of industrial greed, how English rule minted Irish blood and sweat, how English business regarded Irish business, an attack by bookkeepers and lawmakers even more terrible in its consequences than the extirpations of Cromwell.

The effects of this policy were noted by Lord Dufferin in 1867: "From Queen Elizabeth's reign until the union the various commercial contentions of Great Britain never for a moment relaxed their deadly grip on the trades of Ireland—one by one, each of our nascent industries was in either stranded in its birth, or handed over, gagged and bound, to the jealous custody of the rival interests in England, until at last every fountain of wealth was hermetically sealed, and even the traditions of commercial enterprise have perished through desuetude."

A modern voice, that of Sidney Brooks, the well known English writer, completes the record with this frank confession "One by one we deliberately strangled her [Ireland's] incipient industries. Woolens, glass, iron, salt cloth, sugar refining, shipbuilding, the cattle and provision trade—all went."

BRIN'S SHIPPING.

Mr. Brooks' refer-nce to shipping may sound amusing today, but as late as the sixteenth century Ireland was a sea power, Irish ships sailing long seven seas, carrying the fine linens and serges of Ireland, and the manufactures of the markets of Spain, France and South America, and exchanging other strandard

SUBMARINES TO SCOUR SEA FOR WAR SALVAGE

Plans are now being made for the employment, on a large scale, of a special type of submarine in salvaging part of the 22,000,000 tons of material that were sent to the bottom of the sea during the war.

Thus the instrument through which so much destruction was wrought will itself be the means of reclaiming some of the enormous waste represented in the cargoes of torpedoed ships now resting on the floor of the ocean.

Boston marine engineers, as well as members of the profession elsewhere, are watching the progress of the development of the salvaging submarine with the greatest interest, and it is confidently predicted that its performance will open up an enormously profitable field.

Much of the material sunk during the war is, of course, too beyond all hope of recovery, but a good share of the $5,000,000,000 worth of cargo was sunk in tidewater and can be salvaged. The salvaging submarine is able now to operate at a depth of 300 feet, whereas 180 feet has been the limit at which the old-fashioned diver can work.

BOTTOM PAVED WITH COAL.

It is not alone in the reclamation of the vast quantities of material lost in the war that the salvaging submarine will be valuable. Bottoms of deep parts of world are paved with material which can be salvaged repeatedly on both coasts of the Atlantic, the result of the countless sea tragedies of the years.

The stretch of water from Boston to Norfolk, for instance, has been called the world's greatest coal field. So many times have been the sinkings of coal barges in the years that the bed of the ocean there is paved with coal to northern points that it might almost be said that the ocean bottom along these routes is paved with coal. In one week last Winter 40,000 tons went down in Long Island sound alone.

Coal is only one of many materials which are not affected by water, iron and steel and other materials can remain under water for years without injury, as they corrode only when exposed to air.

Even cotton, it is said, can be salvaged profitably after a long stay in the water. A filmy growth forms on the outside of the bale, protecting the interior from damage.

Many of the ships struck down by submarines during the war were laden with food supplies. Most of this food was packed in such a form and in such a manner that it will "keep" indefinitely, even at the bottom of the sea. Food which had remained on the bottom of the ocean for four months has already been salvaged.

MAY FIND OLD TREASURES.

Aside from the purely commercial aspects of the employment of the submarine in salvaging, it opens up romantic possibilities that challenge the adventurous. Many who have read the Stevensonian treasure hunt had passed, but the salvaging submarine promises to bring it back, for the annals of shipping are replete with instances of the loss of vessels bearing precious cargoes of gold and silver and jewels.

These piles of untold wealth in the caverns of the sea are the property of whosoever takes them, for it is an immemorial law that "finders is keepings" in the business of sea salvaging.

If some of the half-legendary stories of these lost treasure ships are true, the fortune contained in them would make the owner of the adventurous submarine finding and salvaging them rich beyond his wildest dreams.

ONE DEAD, 2 HURT AS AUTO PLUNGES INTO STREAM

North Clarendon, Vt., June 29.—An auto in which Vergennes, Vt., where they were planning to attend the funeral of a sister, Leonard F. Lehoup, aged thirty-one, a contractor of Worcester, Mass., was killed; his brother, Ulysses, was badly injured about the body, and a nephew, Carleton L. Lehoup, received a fractured jaw and a dislocation of the right shoulder blade when the touring car in which they were riding crashed and skidded by the dead man, crashed through the railing at the entrance of a covered bridge over Cold River and plunged into the bed of the stream, twenty feet below. The injured men were also from Worcester.

No one witnessed the accident, but it is supposed that Leonard Lehoup was killed outright, as his neck was broken and his body thrown clear of the car.

AGIDE JACCHIA CONSIDERED BY LOS ANGELES

May Conduct New Symphony Orchestra Backed by Son of W. A. Clark

Agide Jacchia, the gifted and popular conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past three seasons, is being seriously considered for the post of conductor of the new Symphony Orchestra of Los Angeles. Several telegrams have passed between the organizers of the new orchestra and officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra relative to the subject. It is understood to persons close to the situation that Mr. Jacchia is the most likely candidate thus far considered and that his chances of appointment are excellent.

W. A. Clark, Jr., son of the copper magnate, is the active backer of the orchestra being organized in Los Angeles. It is said he will spend $100,000.

During the thirty-four years of the existence of the pops in Boston no conductor has more successfully led the Summer season concerts as Mr. Jacchia. He is a musician of the finest class, and is in the front rank as a composer. He is forty-four years of age and was a favorite pupil of Mascagni, the great Italian composer, at the Pesaro Conservatory. At the age of twenty-three Mr. Jacchia became an operatic conductor. He first came to the United States in 1899 with Mascagni's opera company. He conducted at the Academy of Music, New York, for a season and then at the Century Theatre, New York. He came to the Boston Symphony from New York.

LIVE WIRE KILLS BOY ON TOP ELECTRIC POLE

Braintree, Vt., June 29.—Seventeen-year-old Hiram Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Dillon of Sunbury Hill, was instantly killed while doing stunts on an electric light pole of the Hortonia Power Company near his home.

Another boy, Norman Reish, had climbed the pole and caught hold of the lower wire, which was dead. Hilton, not to be outdone, climbed to the top of the pole and took hold of the upper wire, which carried 2,300 volts. He dropped to the ground and breathed but two or three minutes. He was dead when Dr. E. J. Cray arrived.

Beside his parents the boy leaves a brother and a sister.

HONEY HAZZARD CHARGED WITH $6,000 THEFT

Released on $10,000 Bonds, Faces Court Today; Miss Puffer Claims Goods

Aver, June 29.—Charged with the larceny of goods valued at $6,000 from his former fiancee, Miss Mabel E. Puffer, "Honey" Hazzard was to be arraigned in the district court here before Judge Warren H. Atwood today. Thus the romance of the wealthy white woman and her negro sweetheart is brought to a dramatic close.

Hazzard was arrested in Lowell and released in $10,000 bonds following an attempt by George H. Wilson, counsel for Miss Puffer and her temporary guardian, to locate many articles of value which he claimed were stolen. He had shortly before the note merely announced their intention to wed.

"HONEY'S" HOME RAIDED.

Hazzard's home here was raided by the police in search of some of the valuables Miss Puffer is alleged to have given him.

The list penned Miss Puffer enumerated the valuables and money she had signed over to Hazzard. The woman alleged that she had turned over a large amount to Hazzard in addition and ended up by giving a long list of other valuables that had either been given Hazzard or to members of his family.

Then Mr. Wilson set out to find Miss Puffer and promptly found the money. It was not until after a long conference with his client, during which the bride-elect cried and told him everything, and after he had searched the missing articles at Sands Point, that Mr. Wilson left satisfied that he had enough to carry out a warrant charging the negro with the larceny of the money.

At his request Judge Atwood issued the warrant. Chief of Police Patrick J. Scully, accompanied by Mr. Wilson and Attorney John D. Carney, who was retained as counsel for Miss Puffer's relatives, started for Lowell, where Hazzard has been staying for the past week, to make the arrest. They returned to Aver empty handed. Hazzard was not there. It was stated that he had gone to Boston with his brother. They left the warrant with the Lowell police and the man was arrested later.

Immediately on receiving word that Hazzard had been arrested Chief Scully went to the Hazzard home with a search warrant. And there he found scores of articles which Miss Puffer had stated had passed from her hands to the Hazzards. There were clocks, a phonograph, old and valuable furniture, old china, a gold watch, jewelry and other articles, purses, laces, a toilet set, glassware and many other pieces of personal property. These articles were immediately removed to the police station.

IGNORANT OF MONEY.

Mrs. Hazzard, the accused man's mother, and his sister, a Mrs. Roland, were the only ones present at the time the search was made. They looked over the articles without much protest, but when questioned about the money they declared they knew nothing about it. Miss Puffer stated that besides the money she had taken from various banks and turned over to Hazzard, she gave him a number of gold pieces.

FAILS IN NON-STOP FLIGHT TO BOSTON

Washington, June 29.—Lieutenant Ralph K. Johnson, who left Arcadia, Fla., to attempt a non-stop flight to Boston, was forced to land twenty-three miles from Newbern, N. C., after having covered approximately half of the distance. The plane was wrecked in landing. Johnson will make another attempt from Arcadia soon.

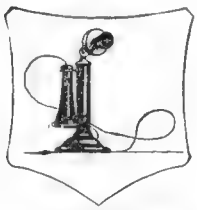
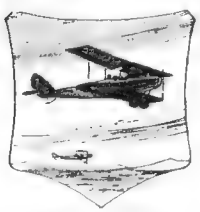
The Telegraph

Invented by Samuel F. B. Morse, of New York, in 1832. Developed and exhibited by him in 1835.



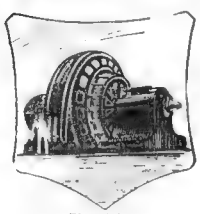
The Telephone

Invented by Alexander Graham Bell, and first exhibited at Philadelphia in 1876. It was invented some years prior to that date.



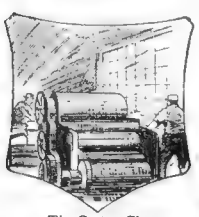
The Aeroplane

First flown at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on Dec. 19, 1903, by the Wright Brothers. Distance covered 800 feet. Compare this with the Trans-Atlantic flight of the NC-4 by Lt. Commander Albert C. Read, U. S. N., completed May 31, 1919.



Electricity

The most important applications of the force have been made by Thomas A. Edison, of Orange, N. J. The great inventor was born in 1847.



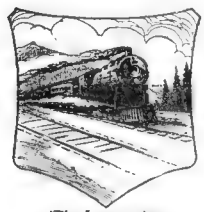
The Cotton Gin

This great saver of time and labor, which did so much for the industry of the country, was invented by Eli Whitney (1765-1825).

The Steamship

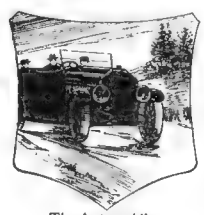
Invented by Robert Fulton, and first demonstrated on the Seine in 1803. He later built the Clermont—the first steam-boat in the U. S. in 1807.

The first Trans-Atlantic trip by a steam vessel was made by S. S. "Savannah," sailing from Tybee, Georgia, in 1819.



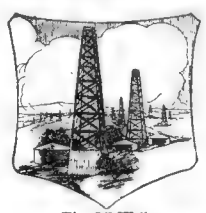
The Locomotive

Invented by George Stephenson, in 1829. Its real development in this country was carried out by M. W. Baldwin, of Philadelphia.



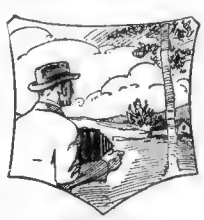
The Automobile

Developed in the United States by George B. Selden, who first demonstrated his vehicle in 1874.



The Oil Well

First conceived and demonstrated by Col. E. L. Drake, near Titusville, Pa., in 1859. That year's production in the U. S. was 2,000 barrels of oil. The present annual output is several millions.



Photography

The first photographs taken in the United States were made by Prof. John Draper, of New York. Later improvements were made by Talbot in 1841. The gelatino-bromide process (instantaneous photography) was invented by Dr. Maddox in 1871.

Welcome, Peace!

CIGARS UNITED

EVERY citizen of this great Republic can be justly proud of his country's record in the World War now happily brought to a final conclusion by the signing of the Peace Treaty.

With a unity of purpose that not only drew from the world at large its acknowledgement of our unselfish devotion to the highest ideals, but surprised even ourselves when the supreme test came, we have shown as never before the strength of our national character.

It has been said, we were so engrossed in business affairs that we were suspected of being no better than a country of "dollar chasers." The War has seen that reputation of sordidness lived down. Throughout the trying crises of the War the higher aims of justice, humanity and honor have led us on to the lofty goal where Right enthroned makes of Might a servant, not a Master.

No war job was too big for us, no obstacle so insurmountable, no sacrifice so fearsome that we could not face it with forces of men, might and money, made resistless by a lofty conception of the noblest use to which they can be put.

Now for the glorious rewards of Peace!

Let us show that national character is as strong in Peace as in War.

First of all, let us show it in the unity of spirit which gave us and our Allies a victory in arms.

Let every mother's son of us find his appointed post and fill it valiantly. Let every man with his shoulder to the wheel strain for a united prosperity, keeping always in mind, as one with another we resume our peaceful lifework, those ideals of fairness which alone make for lasting success.

To the United States, first, last and all the time let us dedicate our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

To this pledge of loyalty to home and country, let us all subscribe anew, that we may worthily share in a Peace we helped to win, and that in our American citizenship thus preserved from aggression, we may rejoice with all the love men should have for a home and country that are the best the sun shines on.

(To Be Continued.)

Lazy Life During Hot Months Causes Lazy Liver

AT no other time is the girl so constant a companion of her mother as when she is emerging into womanhood. There are so many questions to ask; so much she needs to know.

And school is over. Here is now a lazy, inactive, careless life. No wonder she is not always as lively and as well as she should be at her age. Let the mother inquire if the bowels are functioning properly, for there lies the basis of good and poor health.

It will usually be found that a laxative is needed, and none will give safer and quicker relief than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. Taken tonight, it acts freely and pleasantly in the morning. The head is again clear, the body light. There is renewed interest in life.

A dose of Syrup Pepsin now and then is almost a necessity for everyone in hot weather. A bottle can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter being the family size, or a free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

RUBBER ISSUES STRONG AND ACTIVE

Leathers Advance, While Steels, Oils and Motors Recede During Morning

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were rather irregular in the early trading this morning, but there was a resumption of strength after the first hour, and at the close of the session the outside list was generally higher. Rubber shares were the leaders in the upward movement, while the coppers, oils and motors showed fractional losses. Trading was on a broad scale, the sales for the first hour amounting to 400,000 shares.

MANY ISSUES WEAKENED

At noon included General Motors, Baldwin Locomotive, Crucible, Reading, American Smelting, Sheffield, Vanadium, Republic I. & S., Pan-American Petroleum, U. S. Food Products and Industrial Alcohol.

Liberty 3½s were off ½ at 99.94, while the 4s were unchanged at 98.80 and the 4¼s were off ½ at 98.80. Total sales of bonds, par value, $4,000,000.

PRICES HIGHER AT OPENING

Steels, coppers and rubbers were the features of the opening dealings, with gains of around 1 point in the former and fractions to 2 points in the latter. Oils and motors were heavy, with losses of around 1 point. Coppers ruled fractionally higher.

n Strong in New York, Then Weaken

ISSUES STRONG AND ACTIVE

Leathers Advance, While Steels, Oils and Motors Recede During Morning

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were rather weak in New York at noon, but were above the morning's lowest level, there having been a reaction late in the first hour and a rallying tendency toward the close of the second. Trading was dull when it began strong, but after orders from the outside had been executed demand showed itself quickly that bears applied pressure with some success. The offices reported. Moderate buying was very active. Traders were quick to take profits, but even under realization selling the small supply of stocks was not large.

Rubber shares were a feature for strength and activity, Akron advancing the most. U. S. Rubber sold at its record high and more than two points above its second record, common. Steels, oils and motors receded during the morning. The market was active at declining formation, transactions being a the million-share ratio.

MANY ISSUES WEAKENED.

Stocks to show the largest losses at noon included General Motors, Studebaker, Crucible, Reading, American Cotton Oil, American Smelting, American Woolen and Texas Canadian Pacific, Cerro de Pasco, Sloss Sheffield, Pan-American, Texas Company, U. S. Steel Preferred and Industrial Alcohol. They had declined from one to more than three points.

Among the strongest issues were Corn Products, American Writing Paper preferred, Locomotive, Central Leather, Pittsburgh Coal and Lackawanna Steel. They had advanced from one to nearly three points.

U. S. Steel was off ¼ around 12 o'clock, ranging from 107½ to 108⅝. Coppers ruled fractionally lower.

PRICES HIGHER AT OPENING.

Over Sunday orders to buy stocks were numerous and at the opening of the exchange there was a general advance, with Ajax Rubber, American Locomotive, American Woolen common, Corn Products, General Electric, Cerro de Pasco, Lackawanna, Pittsburgh Coal, Republic Steel, Studebaker, Industrial Alcohol and U. S. Rubber all ascending a point or more. Recent high prices were attained in the outset by U. S. Rubber and Corn Products, while Hide & Leather sold at its highest after a few transactions. Lackawanna, active began at its year's highest. Ajax Rubber was the strongest issue in early trading, advancing eight points within half an hour. Fractional gains were scored throughout the list, but rails as a class participated to the least extent in the upward movement. Profit taking followed gains of some issues soon after the start, but at the end of thirty minutes of active trading the market remained not far from the opening level.

PEACE HAD BEEN DISCOUNTED.

There was disappointment in some quarters because the acceptance of peace treaty by Germany has not caused a greater price advance. But most traders were of the opinion that signing of the treaty had been quite thoroughly discounted before Saturday. Submission by the German head here especially emphasized that the market could not be said to have labored under any suspense. The professional element generally claim this morning that a sharp reaction should be expected, but is continued to buy stocks, and there is no evidence of pessimism in high financial circles. As the public buying interest at present is confined to specialties. Business reports are very favorable to industrial concerns, and there is belief that business is about to rival the stock market.

COPPER METAL PRICE STEADY AT WEEK-END

There was no change in the copper situation at he end of last week. Metal was firm at latest quotations and in trade circles further advances are expected. Dealers have predicted that twenty cents a pound will be asked and obtained before the end of July. Sell rs are not anxious to commit them selves to future deliveries at present prices.

The labor situation is restricting production in the Michigan copper zone. Waterb ry and elsewhere have been shut down on account of strikes. This will cau e a poor showing for June in rega d to copper consumption.

It is poss ble that production, which has bee curtailed 50 or more per cent., may decrease next month. There is talk of a mining strike and the situation i Butte is being closely watched. Developments are expected tomorr w. It is generally understood that some managements will not increase mines' pay and, in view of the large r etail surplus, are willing to suspend operations for a considerable peri d.

FIRM OPENING FOR BOSTON MARKET

Copper Issues Quiet, but a Few Make Small Gains

At the opening stocks were firm in Boston, but early business was of limited volume. Mexican Investment Company sold its stock on change opened at 69½, a half point decline from its closing curb figure. It soon recovered the loss but was not active.

Century Steel began with half a point advance and a gain soon showed a two-point gain. Then it reacted a fraction. Coppers had a narrow range as a group and were in fair demand only. Most of them sold a shade higher. Lake Copper was active in this class during the morning were Mayflower-Old Colony. Copper Range and Davis-Daly. Among other issues to figure more or less prominently in trading were Waldorf, Hancock, which sold ex-dividend, and Ventura Oil. United Fruit advanced a point on one sale.

By noon the local market was strong on the whole.

The Art Metal Construction Company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ cents, payable July 1st to stock of record July 15, and a special dividend of 25 cents, payable August 1st to stock of record July 11 This is the same declaration as in recent quarters.

The Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company has passed its quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent, and it declined four points on the New York Exchange. The passing of its dividend is attributed to labor troubles in the Granby district and to the condition of the metal market.

U. S. SELLS PLATINUM AT $106 AN OUNCE

Washington, June 30.—Announcement has been made by the War Department that it is offering its present surplus of platinum for sale at a minimum of $106 per ounce, and iridium at a minimum of $320 per ounce, prices and orders subject to cancellation without notice.

The sales will be made from the New York assay office and will be handled by the commanding officer of materials, New York district ordnance office, No. 1107 Broadway, New York. The minimum lot which will be considered by the committee will be 1,000 ounces, unless a smaller and the maximum amount that will be disposed of to a single purchaser will be 5,000 ounces, unless the results of sales deems it advisable to grant special permission for sale of larger quantities.

COFFEE PRICES SOARED DURING LAST WEEK

The advance in coffee prices which has been going on since the armistice began is due to world wide trade conditions which gave South American planters control of the situation. The lack of shipping was one factor and another was a frost which curtailed the crop. Within a year prices doubled and the increase this month was about 30 per cent. There were rumors that the Brazil government, the New York Coffee Exchange recently, the allowed limit of a cent and a half pound a day having been reached.

Lower grades of coffee which sold to retailers at 15 to 18 cents a pound last Autumn brought 25 to 28 cents last week and a leading New England brand which formerly sold at 28 cents climbed to 43 cents wholesale.

Steel Production Increasing

According to the Pittsburgh estimate, steel production is about 6 per cent. of capacity, will operations having expanded within a week. Most of the demand is for current needs and while railroads are not building trades begin to buy on anything approaching a normal basis there will be a great increase in mill activity. The pig iron market has improved.

Boston & Maine Earnings

The May report as to the operating income of the Boston & Maine was a disappointment. It showed a deficit of $100,581 compared with a balance of $582,000 for May, 1918. Gross earnings for the month were increased $82,567. There was $84,970 decrease for April and $222,000 for March.

Production of Linters

Production in this country of linters for the nine months ended by April last was 876,990 equivalent 500-pound bales. It was the smallest for such a period in three years.

More Demand for Tin

Tin plate manufacturers are in need of more tin than was supposed, according to inquiries now in progress. It is said the demand is not steady, although recent sales have aggregated a considerable tonnage.

American Locomotive Profits

It is believed that the report of the American Locomotive Company for the year ending today will show about $40 a share earned on common stock after all deductions for taxes and reserves.

City Loans

Winthrop, Mass., will receive bids until 12 m. July 1 for the purchase of a loan of $25,000, maturing Nov. 15, 1919.

Bedford, Mass., will receive bids until 8 p. m., July 1, for the purchase of a loan of $75,000, dated July 1, 1919, and maturing June 20, 1920.

...s Young Business Genius, E. G. Liebold, Tells How He Would Handle the World's Wealth

Copyright, 1919, Star Company

Under the title of "Speculation Versus Production—Which Creates Wealth?" E. G. Liebold, chief of Henry Ford's young business men, has written for Mr. Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent, a very interesting discussion of world finance.

Mr. Liebold's analysis of the money situation, of credits and what he terms "real wealth" is extremely ingenious.

Financial sharks may not agree with his premises, nor indorse his conclusions. Frequently perfectly logical propositions meet this fate. But sound or otherwise Mr. Liebold has worked out a plan that is worth your reading here, somewhat abbreviated from the original article:

How could the League of Nations undertake the economic control of the planet? The following article is offered as a suggestion toward a possible plan for such control. We shall view the fundamental facts and illustrate their bearing on the problem:

1. Two facts of the old order are fundamental. First, that within the nation itself the tendency of financial control is toward its largest centralized banking institutions: either a government bank or a closely allied group of private financiers. Second, in the world tended to the same centralizing ...ole. As an American credit is in the ...ntrol of New York interests, so, before the war, world credit was controlled in London—the British pound sterling was the standard of exchange for the world's trade.

In the nation this tendency led to the alignment of the speculative against the productive forces, creating a ...ss that dealt solely in exchange a... class that dealt in products. In the world this tendency led to the set... up of a speculative nation as against the productive nations.

The meaning of such a situation for world peace is not effected by the fact that now the United States has become the creditor nation of the world. By reason of the trade fluctuations caused by the war our country has accumulated the larger part of the world's gold, has gained control of the world's credit, and can hardly avoid, if old conditions are to remain, becoming the world's banker. The possession of this gold under the present financial order of the world, makes it imperative that our financiers force it into all sorts of channels where interest may be earned, and this forced financial activity contains possibilities of international misunderstanding impossible to exaggerate. To boast, therefore, the United States' good fortune is simply to state the United States' opportunity to become the speculator nation of the world and a potent source of world disturbance as Great Britain's financial monopoly has been. Moreover, our having achieved the position of financial arbiter of the world would seem to impose upon us the duty of attempting a correction of hitherto accepted though mistaken practices.

Two methods of reform are open to us, one beginning at the bottom and one beginning at the top. The latter is the more orderly way, the former is being tried in Russia. If our reform should begin at the top it will require a social vision and an altruistic fervor of a sincerity and intensity which is wholly inconsistent with selfish shrewdness.

2. The wealth of the world neither consists in nor is adequately represented by the money of the world. Gold itself is not a valuable commodity. It is no more wealth than hat checks are hats. But it can be so manipulated, as the sign of wealth, as to give its owners or controllers the whip-hand over the credit which producers of real wealth require. When money itself becomes an article of commerce to be bought or sold before real wealth can be moved or exchanged, the usurers and speculators are thereby permitted to lay a tax on production. The hold which the controllers of money are able to maintain on productive forces is seen to be more powerful when it is remembered that though money is supposed to represent the real wealth of the world, there is always much more wealth than there is money, and real wealth is often compelled to wait upon money, thus leading to that most paradoxical situation—a world filled with wealth but suffering want.

It now perhaps begins to be apparent to the reader why the League of Nations should also control the economic interests of the world, at least in a way to negative these evils. If it is to fulfil the world's expectation of peace. It would mean a sanctioned control of the market rules of the world.

The member nation seeking the sanction of the commerces section of the league would deposit therewith bonds issued upon the real wealth of the country. What is a nation's real wealth? First, its land... second, its improvements thereon; ...its production. But no nation will pl... its land, its sovereign domain; so that ... the purposes of credit the fruits of its creative labor upon the land might be pledged.

In exchange for these bonds issued upon internal improvements or production, and bearing interest, the league would issue trade participation certificates to the ...unt represented by the bonds, and ... certificates when pretablish the ... market would ...credit without its being ...bject to inspection or speculation of ... mercy of those groups which ex...tort high toll for assisting to obtain credit. A nation would trade to the extent of its actual wealth if it pleased, but no further. Back of its certificates would be the guaranty of the League of Nations that the value of the certificates actually existed in tangible, exchangeable property.

Under this proposed arrangement, if a nation wished more credit in the marts of the world it would simply have to produce more wealth. The most industrious and efficient nation would naturally have the large proportionate basis of credit.

3. Some of the benefits of this plan to the participating nations and the world at large may now be noted.

It would relieve the nations of their dependence on those who have gained control of the gold of the world.

It would equally relieve those nations which are able to "corner" the gold of the necessity of forcing it into all sorts of speculative fields to win interest thereon.

Moreover, it would prevent that most frequent source of difficulties between nations—the system which makes debtor and creditor countries. Credit would no ...onger be a strangle-hold by the creditor on the debtor, for credit would always be money-credit, a sign of actual wealth in possession, not a sign of need.

It would be a guaranty of world peace because all transactions involved in preparation for war would have to pass through the hands of the league if they were made at all. The nation which should stop production of real wealth in order to make munitions for the manufacture or exchange of which the League would issue no Trade Participation Certificates—that nation would simply be isolating itself from the world and blockading itself economically to its own undoing. It would be impossible to finance a war. Gold would no longer be the magic war-maker of the world.

This, in broad and sketchy outline, is a plan that might well be adopted to complete the nobly conceived and ably executed plans which comprise the political part of the League of Nations.

Stars and Stripes

Some folks are mean enough to say the gentleman who has saved daylight under the clock changing law is a descendant of the enthusiast who invented perpetual motion.

When that "still small voice" within seems to make a noise like a calliope there is hope for the sinner.

You cannot fool all the women all the time, but an expensive birthday present will occasionally pacify one of them.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE HIGH ADVENTURE

By S. E. KISER

TWO hundred feet above the street
A window-washer rubs a pane;
He may regard it as a treat
To labor thus for honest gain,
Or pain may fill his breast up there
As, looking down on us below,
He thinks of all the risks we share
Where tides of traffic ebb and flow.

WHO knows what longings fill his breast,
What high ambition he may claim?
The heart that beats beneath his vest
May have the urge that ends at fame;
Or, with artistic tendencies,
He may be doomed to work and wait,
A bucket held between his knees,
His future in the lap of Fate.

HIS mother, too, with jealous care,
May once have clasped him in her arms;
No doubt when he first climbed a stair
Her breast was filled with wild alarms,
And, poised between the earth and sky,
With tender memories astir,
Perhaps he hums some lullaby
That long ago he learned from her.

WHO asks his name? How many care
How bright his prospects are or dim?
There may be little ones somewhere
Whose trust, whose hopes are all in him,
Or possibly he floods the pane
And spatters those who pass below
To get the price to take some Jane
To giggle at a picture show.

THAT MUCH IS SURE

They say there is very little difference between genius and foolishness. Well, it's all in favor of genius, anyhow.

PLENTY OF GLORY WAITING FOR ALL

Now the aviators are beginning to talk about the possibility of flying around the earth, and as soon as they get that done they will doubtless be wanting to use the moon as a way station on their trips to Mars and Venus.

ADDING NEW LUSTRE

Once more the name of George Washington is about to be made famous.

Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

By K. C. B.

Atlantic City, June 28.

DEAR FOLKS.

WHEN WE got to the place.
WHERE THE hydroplanes are.
IT WAS still there.
IN SPITE of my prayers.
THROUGH THE waking night.
THAT SOMEONE would come.
AND SET it on fire.
AND THEY led me away
TO A little office.
AND WITH trembling hand.
I SIGNED a blur.
THAT SOMEONE said
MEANT WHATEVER happened.
IT WOULD be my own fault.
AND AFTER that.
THEY CAME with cotton.
AND STUFFED my ears.
AND COVERED my head.
WITH A leather cap.
TIED UNDER the chin.
AND WRAPPED me up.
IN A leather coat.
SO I had a feeling.
THAT I might fall.
FOR A thousand feet.
AND BOUNCE around.
AND NEVER get hurt.
AND AFTER that.
THEY LED me out.
TO THE hydroplane.
THAT WAS roaring away
ON A sort of float.
AND I heard a man say.
RIGHT CLOSE to my ear
"WELL, ANYWAY.
"HE'S A pretty old guy."
AND I didn't mind that.
SO MUCH as I did.
THAT ALL of the crowd.
THAT WAS hanging around.
SEEMED TO get in step.
AND FOLLOW me.
WITH THAT slowlike tread.
THAT MOURNERS have.
AND I seemed to hear.
THROUGH MY stuffed ears.
THE MUFFLED sound.
OF BEATING drums.
AND I could have sworn.
THAT FROM the heavens.
CAME THE faintest echo.
OF A bugled "Taps."
AND ALONG about then.
I HAD reached the plane.
WHERE THE pilot sat.
AND STEPPED up once.
AND OVER the side.
AND INTO my seat.
AND A great broad strap.
CAME CLEAR around.
AND STRAPPED me in.
AND THE roaring grew.
AND SOMETHING slid.
AND JUST for a moment.
I CLOSED my eyes.
AND WE slid some more.
AND HIT a wave.
AND THE water splashed.
AND I opened my eyes
AND THE goggles I wore.
WERE WET with spray.
AND I thought we had sunk.
AND I'LL tell you about it.
ON ANOTHER morn.
FOR MY space is gone.

I THANK you.

What Do Women Think About?

Here Is Evidence That a Variety of Interesting Things Take Up Their Attention

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

What do women think about?

Your first answer will be that they think about their household duties, about their children, and the other routine cares of wifehood and motherhood.

Women should think about these things, and having a keener sense of duty than men they think about them willingly.

But they think about other things, too, and there could be no better index of what they like to think about than the contents of a magazine, which is made primarily for them and which they read by the hundreds of thousands.

Taking Harper's Bazar for July as the foundation of your index you find that they think

ABOUT FAMOUS WOMEN

For instance. They know that the Queen of Rumania is to visit this country late in the Autumn. They are interested in how she looks, what she wears and what she has been doing since the war stopped devastating her country. They read with pleasure of the report of a possible marriage of her daughter to the future King of England, and that she was the first woman to be elected to the Institut de France since its foundation, in 1795.

You will find they think

ABOUT PRETTY HOMES

They are particularly interested in the bedrooms of famous women like the opera star, Geraldine Farrar Tellegen. They wonder why a woman with as beautiful a place to sleep as is pictured ever gets up from such elegance to work at rehearsals in half dark theatres. And then they wonder what the other rooms are like and they find out in the other pictures.

And they think

ABOUT LOVE

They wonder what really happened to the strangely dressed lady with the candle in her hand walking about like Lady Macbeth, though with a different purpose they hope. Of course, they know that love is the one thing she is looking for and they hope she finds it.

And they think

ABOUT FASHIONS

They wonder if feathers fixed as they are in the picture at the right would look well with that white satin they saw advertised for $2.69 a yard yesterday. They are absolutely certain that fine feathers make fine birds, but will this particular arrangement of feathers be becoming? If not, there are other feathers and other arrangements. Nothing can stop a woman from being attractive if she really puts her mind on it.

And they think

ABOUT DECORATIONS

They know that the right thing in the right place will make home more attractive, so they wonder where they can put the strange looking bird that is a combination of table and working stand and has other uses if one studies its possibilities. It looks somewhat like an Alaskan totem, but looks do not count so much as effect.

So you see there are plenty of things that a woman likes to think about if she can get time and she finds an excellent guide for her thoughts in so artistic and authoritative a magazine as Harper's Bazar.
